A newspaper is a business institution, as much so as a dry goods store, a grocery store or drug store. It cannot afford any more than can its neighbor merchant to indulge in personalities. Suppose Mr. Gotrocks' son imbibes too freely in "joy water" and proceeds to take in the town; upon whom does the duty fall to bring this unruly son to justice? Not the newspaper. Who must say that Bill Gotrocks ought to be kicked to death by a mule? Who must call him a hell hound, a poltroon, a liar, a drunkard, a jackal, a a marplot, a hyena, a viper? Why, the newspaper of course. It would not do for the merchant, or politician to do this, they might lose the support of Bill's father, who is a very wealthy and influential man. Yes, the newspaper must perform this perilous duty. The newspaper man has nothing to lose and if he gets killed he has a pass port to heaven, any way, so what's the difference' But we are inclined to think otherwise.
