WHAT CHICKENS MUST SUFFER

Astonishing What They Pass Through Before Reaching the Real and Ultimate Consumer.

"If this poor chicken knew how much I was enjoying him," remarked a bright woman at a country inn not so long ago, "he would have been glad to die."

That remark might have been good for that particular chicken. He did not have far to travel until he reached his ultimate destination. His first owner brought him to the inn via his own automobile and collected for him. Then it was but a step to the frying pan.

But it is astonishing what some poor chickens have to suffer. First they are killed. Then their lean little carcasses are placed in storage, and before they reach the real and ultimate consumer they have to carry as many as a dozen profits.

As a rule it may be stated that the more profits a chicken accumulates the less he is worth. How some of them hold together long enough to reach the table is a mystery.

And the same is true with many things.

Chicago's Way.

"I haven't tried it in New York, so I don't know how obliging they are here," remarked a Chicago man, "but in Chicago they used to take pains to reimburse patrons of gum and chocolate vending machines if the deposited cent failed to deliver."

"I had been defrauded of several pennies, and finally reported one loss to the ticket agent of the elevated road at the station the cent had been lost. He took my name and address. A few days later I received a letter, saying:

"We regret to learn that you lost one cent on account of one of our machines being out of order. We are sending you herewith gum to make good your loss, and wish to assure you that we use every effort to keep the machines in perfect working order, but we cannot prevent attempts at robbing them, which occasionally damage them or put them out of order."

"It was typewritten, had been copied in a letter press, bore a cancelled two-cent stamp and contained two sticks of gum, a blotter and a return envelope."

Heroic Dream Came True.

Patrolman William Noble of Dorchester, Mass., dreamed that he was standing in Peabody square when runaway fire horses rounded the corner. In his dream he saw five little children in the path of the mad animals. He seized the horses by the bits and brought them to a stop within three feet of the children—and then he woke up.

Still pondering over the dream Noble went off duty, walked to Peabody square and told another "copy" about the dream. Just as he had finished two fire horses dashed around the corner, running wild toward a group of children in the square. At the risk of his own life Noble seized the bits and stopped the pair within a yard of the nearest child. Then he counted the children and was astonished to find there were just five.

Chinese Complexions.

A French writer has given in La Presse Medicale the results of his observations on massage in China. He remarks that the exquisite complexion of the young Chinese women is due not to emulating, as has been suspected, but to careful manipulation of the face done by expert masseuses.

They begin by a gentle pinching of the cheeks between the tips of their fingers, which lasts fully ten minutes; then apply lotions on absorbent cotton, then an unguent, and finish by kneading the cheeks with an extreme delicacy of touch, always proceeding from the nose and commissures of the lips toward the ears.

This is a harmless and physiologically correct process which can be recommended in cases, rarer than they should be, where the physician is consulted concerning a faded or otherwise unattractive complexion.

CHARLES B. AYCOCK.

North Carolina's First Citizen Died Suddenly in Birmingham.

THE ATTACK WAS UNEXPECTED

Was Delivering an Educational Address in The Alabama City When he Was Stricken on the Platform and Died Before Assistance Could Reach Him.

Raleigh, N. C., April 4.—Special.—Charles Brantley Aycock, ex-governor of the state and a candidate for the United States senate, dropped dead while making an educational address in Jefferson auditorium, Birmingham, Alabama, last night at 10:15.

Governor Aycock left here Wednesday afternoon to deliver an address at a branch conference of the southern educational association, which met in the Alabama city. His physicians advised him not to go, but he was especially anxious to make this speech and thought he was able to take the trip. While in the midst of the address he suddenly staggered and fell to the platform before any one could reach him.

JUST FROM HOSPITAL.

The ex-governor has recently returned from a hospital in Philadelphia where he underwent treatment for the past month and thought he was a great deal better. He has been in poor health for sometime and took the hospital treatment that he might rest and recuperate for the campaign, which he intended to make against Mr. Simmons in the United States senate this fall. He returned from the hospital saying that he was much better than for the past year, but still looking very badly. He seemed to have undergone a complete break in health, though there was no constitutional ailment, so the physicians said.

He had announced that he would open his campaign for the senatorship the 12th of this month and at the time of his sudden death he was carrying in his pocket the speech he intended to deliver at the Raleigh auditorium. On this occasion he intended to set forth the platform on which he was to make the race for the senate.

BORN IN WAYNE.

Charles Brantley Aycock was born in Wayne county fifty-three years ago. He spent his boyhood in that county and prepared himself for college in the public schools of Kinston. He graduated at the state university and also read law there. After receiving his license to practice he moved to Goldsboro and there he remained till 1909 when he became governor of the state of North Carolina. At the expiration of his term as chief executive he formed a law partnership in Raleigh and has been practicing in that city since.

Mr. Aycock was twice married, each time marrying the daughter of Elder Woodard, of Wilson. He is survived by a widow and eight children.

THE WHITE SUPREMACY CAMPAIGN.

The campaign of 1900 was a notable one in that the democratic success that year marked a turning point in the history of the "white supremacy" was one of the party issues. The constitutional amendment, taking the vote from the uneducated blacks, was before the people of the state. The campaign followed the unfortunate arrangement of the blacks in the eastern Carolina where many of the offices of town and county were filled by negroes.

As candidate for governor Charles B. Aycock played a very important part in this great and epoch making struggle. However, it was not on this issue alone that he made his campaign. He promised that, should he be elected, every boy and girl in the state would have the opportunity of attending school at least four months in every year. He made this fight for a longer school term the great issue in his campaign. He spoke in every section of the state and the people believed that he meant what he said. At sun down on election day, when the polls were closed and the votes counted, it was found that he had swept the state by about 60,000 plurality, one of the most flattering votes that any candidate for governor has ever received.

THE EDUCATIONAL GOVERNOR.

Governor Aycock, for that is the name by which the fond citizenship of the whole state know him, saw that provision was made for a four months school in every district in the state, and during his four years as governor did more for education in North Carolina than any other man. School houses were built from the seashore to the mountains. Through his efforts, and that of the corps of men he gathered about him, the old North State began slowly to drag herself from the position at the foot of the illiteracy list.

The work that he started in those years did not cease when he left the executive chair. The people of North Carolina had been thoroughly aroused to their educational needs, and today his labors are bearing fruit. No more sincere man ever espoused a nobler cause, and in being stricken while making a speech in behalf of this great work Governor Aycock died in a service that he loved and gave his life to.

Other monuments may be erected to his memory by a people who loved him as they have loved no other public man of this generation, but the school houses that have been erected as the result of his labors will ever be a standing monument in every section of the state to the worth of this great man. His name will be carved high in the tablet of fame and his will be a position high in the ranks of North Carolina's noble sons.

THE FUNERAL IN RALEIGH.

Raleigh, N. C., April 7.—For the profusion of flowers, the multitude in attendance and the sincerity of the tributes paid, the funeral service over the remains of former Governor Charles Brantley Aycock, which were held from the First Baptist church this afternoon, are unparalleled in the history of Raleigh. Never before have so many people gathered here from all sections of the State; never before have so many notable men and persons of every walk in life assembled in Raleigh in numbers as gathered here to-day for the funeral of the ex-Governor.

Hours before the graves the hotels and streets were thronged with North Carolinians, come to add their silent tribute to the dead; come to show their love for the State's educational Governor; come to bow their heads to this friend of man.

Practically the whole of the North Carolina Congressional delegation, including Senator Simmons, all of the judiciary, lawyers, teachers, laborers—all were here.

The floral designs were numerous and beautiful. These flowers were sent by public men, school children and institutions.

The death of Governor Aycock was not unnoticed in the various churches. Ministers, speaking of the risen Lord, paid tribute to the dead Governor, referring to him affectionately and quoting one or more of his eloquent sayings.

Threatening weather in the afternoon did not prevent the crowds from assembling about the capitol, where since Saturday evening at six o'clock the body had lain in state. Hundreds of people formed in line to view for the last time the countenance of the State's beloved leader.

The funeral services were held from the First Baptist church. Hundreds of people, unable to enter, remained on the outside with heads bowed and uncovered. Within Dr. T. W. O'Kelly, pastor of the First Baptist church; the Rev. P. D. Gold, of Wilson, and Bishop Kilgo, of Durham, conducted the simple services. Prof. Wade R. Brown, of Meredith College, conducted the music. Interment followed in Oakwood cemetery.

NEEDLESSLY BLIND.

Many Cases of Blindness Could and Should be Prevented.

There are estimated to be one hundred thousand blind persons, old and young, in this country. Not less than five hundred of these live in North Carolina. Had it ever occurred to you, gentle reader, that at least seventy-five to one hundred of these need not have been blind—ought not to have been, and would not have been—if proper precaution and preventive measures had been employed immediately after their birth?

"What blindness means to an intelligent, capable man or woman," to quote the words of a blind man who has, in the face of heavy odds, taken his place in the world with signal success, "is something which only the Lord and the devil and those who endure it know anything about; in their blackest nightmares, those with sight cannot even imagine it." That it is possible to prevent much of such anguish seems not to have dawned upon the average citizen. Is such ignorance and indifference not criminal, positively wicked? Then who is responsible?

From one-fourth to one-third of all blind children lose their sight from what is usually called "sore eyes," "inflammation," etc. This is really "ophthalmia neonatorum," a germ disease, which can be cured if taken in time and the proper remedies used. These remedies should be applied as soon as the child is born, whether any signs of inflammation are discovered or not. The remedy will do no hurt; it may save your child's sight.

If the eyes, nose, mouth and ears of every new-born babe should be thoroughly washed immediately after its birth in a weak solution of boric acid (borax water), one drop of a solution of nitrate of silver, not stronger than one per cent, put in the eyes, and the child thereafter kept clean, blindness among children in our State would be reduced at least twenty-five per cent. Do you realize what that would mean to the one hundred homes in North Carolina in which there are children "needlessly blind"?

And are you aware what it would save the State financially to thus preserve the sight of all such children? Not less than $20,000.00 a year. Is it not worth the effort? Then does it not behoove every one to do all in his power to spread the information and seek to bless the homes into which the little ones come? Let every mother heed this warning and preserve the sight of her child.

Life's Two Classes.

The world is divided into two great classes, yourself and other people. The latter is more numerous and the former more important.

To Keep Nuts Fresh.

If walnuts or any other kind of nuts are packed in layers of sand and kept in a cool place, they will keep fresh for an indefinite period. Soak them in warm water for an hour before using if you would have them peel as if they had just been gathered fresh from the tree.

New Heroines.

The novelists of the day are taking the "new" women for their heroines; women whom life has struck blow after blow until they have learned the art of laughter; women who know how to jest in the face of disappointment; women who have a comforting sense of humor.
