Victor Herbert's Sixth Floor Appoint ment Was Too Much for His Fat Friend.

Victor Herbert, the musician, owns a six-story house up in the Seventies says the New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Times Star. It is built tall and narrow, like a well. Mr. Her-bert's music room and study occupies the entire sixth floor, and there is no elevator. The other day one of Mr. Herbert's acquaintances wished to see him on a matter of business.

"I'll be here until sharp noon," said Mr. Herbert, "Then I must go to fill an engagement. I con't wait a minute after the hour."

Mr. Herbert's friend is built a good deal like an orange. He makes a good deal of fuss about plain walking. Stair climbing is a thing he never does except under compulsion. When he reached Herbert's home it was just 20 minutes of 12. The servant telephoned up to the music room. "Tell him to come right up," said

Mr. Herbert's fat friend began climbing. He paused at the top of the first fight to breathe a little while, His pauses grew longer and more im passioned at the end of each succeeding flight. When he got to the sixth floor he was just able to dab a damp hand at Herbert and sit down in stuffed chair, and begin to remove the evidences of internal heat from his streaming forehead. Mr. Herbert pulled out his watch.

"It's five minutes to 12," he said, warningly.

His fat friend waved his hand at him mutely, and went right on doing some of the best panting of the currose and fell like a hot-air balloon just before the ropes are cast off.

"Two minutes," said Mr. Herbert. "Uh, uh-ugh," said his fat friend, feeling the veins in his neck thicken. "Twelve o'clock," said Mr. Herbert, snapping the cover of his watch. "Sor ry, I must go. Good-by."
