to luxuriate in their charm. Pale blue with touches of gold or yellow; rose pink, with a touch of orchard at girdle or throat; white, with pale green, and similar combinations selected to harmonize with eyes and hair. It is not unusual to find the negligee of chiffon belted with a crush girdle of roses, or other artificial flowers; it is an attractive and artistic notion. The combining of several tones in the girdle, which is usually of net or chiffon, is another pretty way of introducing interesting combinations; for instance, a pale pink negligee is girdled with a wide sash, having long ends of several folds of vari-colored net or maline, in pink, blue orchid and similar French colorings.

For sports and morning wear, the awning striped materials, linens, ducks, and canvas weaves are particularly well liked. The stripes may run up and down, or around the the figure as shown here. This skirt is fashioned of linen, combining several of the vivid colors now modish, and is worn with a shirt blouse of voile with vest of the men. The square neck is a becoming feature.

Among the simple waist models of the summer are many with the outside pleum. These are of voile, organdy or Georgette, in pink, blue, pale green and similar shades, intended for wear with skirts of black taffeta or with white and colored wash skirts. Pongee is also favored for these outside blouses. Tiny buttons, steel, gilt or gunmetal, and a belt of black or colored ribbon are about the only trimming for these unless it be a second collar of a contrasting shade.

Collars and cuffs are interesting details of blouses; the cuffs usually fit tightly about the wrist, flaring becomingly over the hands. The open throat is of course the modish arrangement for summer, although most of the shirt-waists and other blouses are made with the adjustable collar which may be worn high or low, as fancied.

Why SHOULD I ---Worry---

A few people say that I am an extremist when it comes to appreciating patronage, but it seems to pay; for several of the town's oldest citizens have told me recently that at no time in the history of Scotland Neck has a store, in any line of business, had more customers than mine has now.

Of course, people rather trade where their patronage is highly appreciated, for it insures the strictest attention to their orders and the greatest efforts to give satisfaction.

A store chock full of FANCY & STAPLE GROCERIES of the VERY HIGHEST QUALITY.

Again I thank you!
