WILSON AGAINST INJUSTICE TO CHINA

NEWS FROM THE STATE CAPITOL

(By Maxwell Gorman)

RALEIGH, July 1.—President Wilson is likely to visit North Carolina and speak at Raleigh about the latter part of the present month of July, according to present calculations hereabouts. The visit is expected to occur in response to the invitation extended during the recent session of the Legislature, and on the final circuit of his contemplated swing around the country in behalf of the ratification of the Peace Treaty embodying the League of Nations covenant. It can not be stated in advance of the return of the President (who is expected to land July 7th) just when he will visit this State, but the belief is general hereabouts that he will come.

Gov. Bickett is planning to "employ force" in straightening out the labor troubles at Baden, the important industrial Stant county town, where union workers have informed the governor steps are being taken by the big power companies to evict workers from houses owned by the companies and who, it is alleged, are being discharged because they have identified themselves with labor organizations. The "open shop" policy which brought about the recent adjustment of labor trouble in cotton mills of this state, has been the plan endorsed by the governor and under that policy he would as quickly condemn action by union labor workers who declined to work with non-union workmen.

BOOTLEGGING RIFE IN MEXICO

EL PASO, Texas, July 1.—(By The Associated Press)—Bootlegging has assumed widespread proportions in Agua Prieta, Sonora, Mexico, across the border from Douglas, Arizona, according to Americans who have investigated liquor conditions in the border state. Open saloons are prohibited by Sonora state laws, but little or no effort has been made by the authorities to curtail illicit liquor traffic, they say.

Cognizance of the situation has been taken by the authorities, however, to the extent that a bill has been introduced in the state Chamber of Deputies permitting the establishment of open saloons for the sale of light wines and beer under strict state supervision. The bill purposes limiting the number of saloons in accordance with population and the payment of high state and municipal licenses.

PARIS, July 1.—Now that the work of the conference is over and it is possible to review the accomplishments of the past six months, diplomats here are becoming more and more deeply convinced that the Japanese have more reason to be satisfied than any other delegation with the proportion of the spoils of war which they are bearing away with them from Paris.

The Japanese came to the conference with limited aims; they leave with the utmost they really hoped to get. No other peace commission can boast as much, not even the British.

Lloyd George has to go back to England admitting that instead of "paying all the war costs"—as he told the British electorate would be the case—Germany could be made to bear less than a quarter of Britain's financial losses.

Baron Makine entered the conference as senior Japanese delegate, announcing that Japan had "no territorial ambitions in China" and that as for Ssingtau, "she would hand it back to China under terms of the notes exchanged between China and Japan in May 1915."

All that Japan needed was for the conference to give her an economic stranglehold on Shantung, China's richest province, and although President Wilson rebelled against a manifest injustice to China, Japan had her way because she had tied up all the Entente powers with secret agreements concluded whilst the war was in progress.

Japan-China Exchanges

The essential passages of the notes exchanged in May, 1915, between China and Japan were as follows:

"At the conclusion of the present war the Japanese Government receives the absolute free disposition of the leased territory of Kiau Chau Bay, Japan will return it to China under the following conditions:

"1—Opening of the whole Kise Chau as a commercial port.

"2—Establishment of a Japanese concession in any locality designated by the Japanese Government.

"3—Establishment, if the Powers so desire, of an international concession."
