YANKS ARE MORE SCIENTIFIC

March 2.—"American way ahead of us in use of oil fuel for ships," H. Williams, an expert on engineering, at a recent meeting of the Institute of Marine Engineers. "There is hardly any doubt coming over today that burning oil," he predicted. "Today for shipping is not the slightest doubt that cheaper fuel than coal. There are many ports today that are half the price of coal. American oil is displacing very rapidly. Oil can be used in East in practical quantities. Wherever coal is used will displace it. We know if we used coal to drive our warships, we should be going into its use in a tremendous future."
