Consumption is generally supposed to be an incurable disease. Why? Because medical men, who of all others abould have been the last to encourage such an unphilosophi-cal and dangerous assumption, have insisted upon and propagated it with a persistency which seems atmost incredible in the light of science and of truth. We used the term 'dangerous' advisedly, for what can be more depressing and injurious to the consumptive than brooding overthe ideatounded solely upon the flat of his physician-that his malady is mortal, and that the utmost that can be done for him is to ender his exit from this world as easy as possible. Such melancholy and hopeless reflections as this belief engenders among consumptive patients, does as much, if not more, to hasten their departure for the land of shadows, as the tubercles in their lungs. Away with such a hopeless theory. Happily the GREAT MASTERS OF MEDICINE have entered their protest against it and confuted by the most positive testimony the monstrous fallacy. Dangerous as pulmonary phthisis is, its terrible ravages may be stayed and the lungs restored to a sound condition even after suppuration has taken place. Every experienced surgeon knews that post-mortem examinations of aged persons who have died in the ordinary course of nature have repeatedly disclosed the traces of pulmonary ulcers entirely cicatrized. The argument, therefore, against the possibility of healing a pulmonary absecss because the immediate seat for the disease cannot be reached, has allow leg to stand upon. Over fifty instances of the discovery of cicatrized ulcers in the scores of others, French, English and German, might easily be cited toprove their certain curability. To treat any malady rationally its character and morbid influence must be known, The dissecting knife has disclosed all the We know that tubercles in the lungs vary in size from granules smaller than a pin's head to that of a large bean. These do 20.00 velope into open ulcars technically known as vemical which afterwards spread over a surface several inches in diameter. Their sacs are filled with a yellow, greenlah, grayish matter generally very offensive. The of protracted sicknes.

Its immense superiority to the man titude of officinal and proprietary med cines designed for a similar purpose, which have preceded it, lies in the fact that it is *n Absolute Ebadicant of pulmonary and throat diseases, while they at the best were merely palliations. It is not alone that the preparation dislodges the pulmonic virus, it possesses balsamic properties peculiarly adapted to soothe the lacerated lung. wile by its tonic operations it greatly facilitates and hastens the healing process. As a preventive Holloway's, Cough Cune AND LUNG BALSAM is equally efficacious. Coughs, especially the dry backing coughs which are so common, are terribly fruitful sources of consumption. The suf-THE MOST DURABLE PIANOS | ferer at first has a feeling of rawness in the throat, tightness across the chest, then dangerous inflammation sets in, which may give rise to hemorrhage or the formation of vomical, if it is not speedily checked and the cough loosened. HOLLOWAY'S COUGH CURE AND LUNG BALSAM accomplishes this with a degree of promptitude and certainty which astonishes the patient. No type of throat, lung or bronchial disturbance can resist its curative influence. It overcomes the most obstinate forms of this class of disorders, and broke up at once the most violent paroxysms of coughing. All its ingredients are sourcly vegetable. Some of them are cuiled from sources entirely new to pharmaey, and all are possessed of properties of marvelous remedial efficacy. The unsolicited testimonials which its proprietors have been c ceiving since its introduction to the public, from persons who have experienced or witnessed its wonderfully beneficial effects, fully justify the belief that it must, ere long become the STANDARD AMERICAN SPECIFIC FOR ALL DISEASES OF THE RESPIRATORY OR-
