

The Daily Herald, A. M. WADDELL, - Editor and Proprietor. TOWN PRINTER. WILMINGTON, Friday Evening, March 29, 1861.

[We are permitted to publish the following letter from a prominent gentleman of Mississippi, to his brother, in this State. It was written, as will be seen, before the writer had heard the result of the North Carolina election.]

DEAR BROTHER: I find myself a little slow in replying to your letter. The reason is that for several weeks past, events of so interesting a character have been transpiring that it has taken nearly all my time to read the telegraphic dispatches, and the intelligence reaching us through other sources, from Charleston, Jackson, Tallahassee, Montgomery, Millidgeville, Baton Rouge, Washington, and other centres of interest; and the news from all these points, I am happy to say, with the exception of Washington, has been of a character to swell with pride and joy the heart of the Southern patriot.

On the 9th January, my adopted State followed that lead; on the 10th, Florida; on the 11th, Alabama; on the 19th, Georgia; and on the 20th, Louisiana; and ere this, I hope Texas, in despite of the traitor who has forced her to act through an irregular Convention, has united her destiny with that of her sisters of the full blood.

On last Monday the work of reconstruction began, and though we have no tidings from Montgomery yet, I hope to hear before the middle of the month that these seven States, which by their works show their faith, are again united under a new and friendly Federal government, both able and willing to protect southern rights and southern institutions. Into this new and better Union, we desire all the Southern States to enter, and the old North State, I hope, will not be the last to do so.

The course of many of your prominent men almost leads me to doubt their fidelity to Southern institutions. I think the question ought to be put directly to many of them, whether or not they believe that the negro is in his true position as the slave of the white man, and whether they would not sooner give up slavery than give up the Union.

With us in Mississippi, old party lines have been completely obliterated, and so ought to be with you. No one here now speaks of whigs and democrats. Following the example of our forefathers, in their memorable struggle with the whigs and tories, we will be the next designations of parties; but to the eternal honor of Mississippians, there are none of the latter class within her borders.

What money I can raise I intend to hold subject to the call of my State, or of our new federal government. I have already given to the State of Mississippi the sum of $10,000. I am opposed to all compromises now, but would not object to receiving into our union some of the free States, on the condition that their institutions be shortly freed by southern men.

who are so divided, so inimical, and whose hostility by that instrumentality has already proved both troublesome and dangerous to the South. Does any one who has looked at the history of the country, and seen the progress of the war, and the progress of events, suppose that this adverse sentiment and these deleterious views can be readily eradicated? I fear not.

STOCKHOLDERS MEETING. WILMINGTON, N. C., March 28, 1861.
