Either the original plates engraved by the American bank note company have been allowed to get into improper hands, or the fac simile was obtained by the electrotype process. Taking the first hypothesis, it is difficult to see why the genuine face was not obtained in the same manner; but if the plate was obtained by electrotype, the probable reason for the face not having also been electrotyped is, that the vignette and other portions of it are engraved in several different pieces.

while the back is one piece. In connection with the electrotype theory, it is now remembered that experiments in the duplication of plates by this method were carried on in the treasury building by persons not regularly employed by the government, prior to Mr. Me-Culloch's appointment as secretary, and that any such multiplication of the plates was talked of as a dangerous proceeding at the time. Boxes containing electrotype plates, but not this one, it is believed, are known to have been shipped to New York for backing. Either there or in transit they Mr. Thos.
