Our Policy with Maximilian and Other Foreign Interlopers.

WASHINGTTON, Oct. 20. The fourth volume of the diplomatic correspondence has just been printed. In October, 1863, the government opened a correspondence with the Spanish government, to determine whether the maratime jnrisdiction of her Catholic majesty in the waters which surround the island of Cuba extend only three miles, or whether it extends six miles from the coast of said island. All the correspondence on the subject, together with the project, was to be submitted to the king of the Belgians, as arbiter.

The documents show that up to February, 1864, the Spanish minister at Washington had received no power or instructions to execute the treaty proposed by the United States concerning the maratime jurisdiction. The negotiation, therefore, remains in abeyance. The Marquis of Milaflores, in the November preceeding, informed our minister at Madrid that the draft of the convention had been examined, and that he had afterwards suggested some very slight modifications, calculated to make the nature of the question still plainer. The marquis remained in office until the middle of January following, and he never gave Minister Koerner the least intimamation as to any change of his views on the subiect. Mr. Koerner said he should take the first opportunity to ascertain whether the omission to send instructions was merely accidental, or owing to a change of policy. Secretary Seward, in a letter to him, dated June 3, 1864, says: "This government has no interest or other motive for urging upon the government of her Catholic majesty any diligence in regard to the treaty for the settlement of the limits of the maratime jurisdiction of Spain in the waters of Cuba."

Our New York Correspondence,

NEW YORK, Oct. 21, 1865.

For the last few days we have been quietly and moderately excited about political affairs, On Wednesday evening the democrats held a large meeting at the Cooper Institute, and last night the republicans held another large meeting at the same place. General Slocum, the democratic candidate, appeared and made a short. sharp and telling speech. General Barlow, the republican candidate, was not on hand at all. The speakers for the democrats were Montgomery Blair, John Van Buren, Hon. Sunset Cox. The speakers for the republicans were General Kilpatrick, Dan. Dickinson and Greeley. The numbers were equal; but the democrats were far ahead in the eloquence, wit and spirit of their orators. Their meeting was a grand success: the republican's a fizzle. At the democratic meeting John Van Buren now as broad and strong as that of Dean Swift. THANKS.—Mr. George Robinson, of the South-ern Express Company, will accept our thanks for he exposed the inconsistency of the republicans denset in in the neatest and most telling style. He showed | segently Columbia.

Further Foreign News. LONDON. October 14. The London Times, alluding to the Adams Russel correspondence, says, "it is the most important discussion in reference to the rights and duties of neutrals that has been carried on between the two great manatime powers for many years. we can hardly doubt that the proposal for a commission will ultimately be accepted."

The Times also alludes to the Fenian move-

In a letter of Secretary Seward to Minister Koerner, dated November 23, 1863, he says :

"The idle calumny that the United States have stirred up and are giving aid to the revolutionary movements now occurring in the island of San Domingo, would not be thought worthy of notice if it had not been presented to me by Mr. Tassara. I give you, for your information, a copy of the correspondence which has been held on that subject between him and this department. I am, further, not unwilling to have an occasion to let it be known to Spain, as well as to other nations, how faithfully we practice the duties, as well as assert the rights, of a sovereign state,-The United States neither contrive, nor aid, nor encourage, nor mix themselves up in civil or international wars of other nations. They submit their record on this matter to the examination of the world, and challenge contradictions of its verity. You may express yourself to this effect, and eyen to this extent if occaston should arise in yot conversations with the Marquis of Milaflores

In another letter, dated January 16, 1864, Secretary Seward writes to Minister Koerner:

"Your representations to the Marquis of Mila-flores on the subject of our neutrality in all foreign complications, are approved."

Secretary Seward, in a letter to Minister Koerner, dated February 6, 1864, sent instructions to him repeating that, by the ninth article of the treaty of Washington of the 9th of August, 1842, between the United States and Great Britain, it is stipulated that the parties will unite in all be-[Continued on fourth page.]
