THE LABOR QUESTION.

The subject of the introduction of white labor in the south, to take the place, to a certain extent, of that formerly used here, is attracting very general attention, and is beginning to meet with a certain degree of favor. There is no doubt of the fact that many are desirous of testing the question so often mooted whether white labor would be as profitable as the black has been; and to this end planters and others in some of the adjacent states are making arrangements for an extensive importation of white laborers from the north and Europe. There are others who would naturally prefer to retain the labor to which they have become, by long habit, so thoroughly familiarized, and also from a sense of duty to their former slaves, who have been so suddenly thrown upon their own resources. whereas they were formerly dependent on their masters; but this class are becoming gradually impressed with the opinion that the negro will not work: that freedom has made a fool of him that, in a word, he will not only make it a point hands. Be patient, industrious, virtuous and to work when he feels so disposed and let it pious, and satisfy the government and your alone whenever he takes the notion, but that he the freedom which has been given you. You will be insolent and presumptious towards his should also cultivate and encourage a respectful employer. But in this connection the question demeanor towards those with whom you are arises, what is to become of the negro if we flood the country with white labor? We have with whom you have always lived, and you should them here among us, and they have got to eat, use every honest effort to command their respect. dunk and be clothed.

The answer is simply this: Just in proportion as the freedmen show a disposition to shun work, put on airs and treat the whites with insolence and contempt, just in that proportion will they have to give way to the stern decrees of fate, and freedom, instead of proving a blessing, as it was designed, will be to them a curse. The influx of white labor from the northern states and Europe will drive black labor from our borders, and the negro will have to seek a more congenial clime elsewhere. Already we see the effects of the impressions which are gaining ground in the south with such rapidity, that white labor will love, which "droppeth as the gentle dew from have to be introduced, in the numerous agencies that are springing up in different localities in the south for the purpose of supplying those who may have a preference for this description of labor, among which we may cite the one just established in this city by Messrs. F. W. Foster & Co., whose advertisement will be found in our

But, on the other hand, if the freedmen shall deem it to their interest to show a willingness to become useful citizens instead of drones in the hive, as we think they eventually will, and go to work cheerfully and with the determination to earn an honest living; to treat their employers with respect, and to behave themselves in a proper and becoming manner, they will always find employment among the whites, and be treated with that respect and consideration which is their due. Then there will be no need for the substitution of white labor as a general thing, and the former masters of the freedmen will become their best friends, not only in giving them work and paying them for it, but by aiding them to attain to that position in the scale of human progress which their liberation from bondage has opened up before them in the future.

NEEDLESS ALARM.

There seems to be an impression in this community as well as elsewhere that there is danger of a disturbance occurring among the colored population during the Christmas holidays. We do not say that this feeling is very general in our community, and we must confess that we do not in the least share in the concern which is felt on the subject. We can see no grounds for entertaining any apprehension of such a state of things, and if we did, we have confidence in the ability of the people, aided, as they would assuredly be, by the strong arm of the military, to crush any such disturbance in its inception. But, we repeat, we can see no just grounds for any uneasiness at all. We may have those among us who would endeavor to incite ill-feeling and encourage domestic violence in our midst, but they can hardly effect anything, as self-interest, alone, on the part of those who might be inclined to engage in any such thing, would be a sufficient check in preventing them from attempting it at this time. If the freedmen would but heed the counsel of those who are trying to lead them in the right way, there would be no occasion for any misun-derstanding between the two classes of our any part of North Carolina on the following terms: population. Major Wickersham, the gentlemanly and efficient agent of the Freedmen's Bureau, for the Southern District of North Carolina, has been prompt and unaccount of the Carolina, has been prompt and unceasing in his efforts to promote their welfare, and in the faithful discharge deposited on condition that it is not to be drawn of his duty as their temporary guardian and pro- by us until the persons are delivered. tector, has warned them and endeavored to instill into their minds a knowledge of their true male is bound to give his labor for a sum not exiterests and the extent of their obligations to so. ceeding $15 per month and each female not exciety, desiring that they should become peaceable, industrious, prosperous and law-abiding said terms not to exceed $75 per year for each.

In this connection we publish, for the benefit of those concerned, the following circular just quently deducted from the wages of the persons employed.

It will be recollected by those who may decide on employing this kind of labor that such have issued by Major Wickersham:
