Greenback and Republican Campaign in New Hampshire.

Concord, N. H., October 22 .- There is no more certainty in the political situation than when I last wrote, just after the Maine election. The Greenbackers were full of hope for awhile, and organized clubs and filled up their ranks rapidly, but have taken a chill from the Western elections. The old sachems of Democracy became alarmed at its progress and have been trying to keep it out of their strongholds, as well as the Republicans, and to prevent its spread wherever it had got a foothold in them. track our ship now ploughs was black with the horrors of the tempest : to-day, peaceful waves are cresting the same path with foam wreaths of glittering witeness. Yesterday, perhaps this drifting mass of humanity, animate with all the impulse of that wonderful thing we call life, trem bled in the presence of the death that awaited him, a death made more terrible because accompanied by unchained spirits of air and water! To-day, perhaps his soul is basking in the glory of a land fairer than dreams of Finite can picture. If we could only know that this were so, the stiff body, beaten by the waves and pursued by the demons of the deep, would not produce such a melancholy effect.
