WASHINGTON.

Seems in the Senate—Beck Dissects Edmunds—Hill Draws Out Old Zach Chandler.

SENATE.
WASHINGTON, May 10.—Mr. Eaton introduced, by request, a bill relating to telegraph between the United States and foreign countries. Referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The Senate then proceeded to consideration of the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill.

Mr. Beck of the Committee on Appropriations said the bill was substantially the same as that agreed to by the Committee on Finance at its former session, with a few exceptions.

Mr. Edmunds inquired whether it is called political legislation in the same as that proposed last year, or did it differ by enlargement or diminution.

Mr. Beck replied that he was not prepared to answer, as he had not compared the two propositions.

A message was received from the House announcing that the Speaker had signed enrolled bill to prohibit military interference at elections, and returning the bill for the signature of the President.

He having signed the same it will now be taken to the President.

The Senate then proceeded to action on amendments to the pending bill, and agreed to those restoring compensation of Senate officers, clerk and other employes which the House has reduced.

Mr. Beck moved the reading of the bill be dispensed with, in order to afford Mr. Hill, of Georgia, opportunity to address the Senate, as he intends to leave the city and may not return before the end of the present session.

Mr. Hill proceeded to speak with reference to that part of the bill proposing new legislation, with regard to impressions of elections, etc.

The legislation proposed being very simple. Nothing but repeal of the same laws enacted during and since the late war. He had watched the discussion in order to arrive at the motive which prompted it, and was now satisfied that in this country had entered upon a well, or rather ill considered, but determined purpose of reopening sectional agitation which so long disturbed the people and to consolidate one section of the country against the other for the benefit of a party without reference to the public good.

He then referred to the recent speech of Mr. Conkling as being in that direction, and alluded to Mr. Edmunds in his speech of yesterday as taking the position that the little bill prohibiting military influence at elections would have the effect to change and modify all laws, to which the Senator from Vermont alluded.

The Senator must have known that the bill would not affect, in any degree, the legislation previous to 1865. If the majority in Congress declare from this time forward, that the army and navy shall not interfere with elections, they but re-enact what was the custom, practice and law before 1865.

The speech of the Senator from Vermont ought to be studied by all, as it showed the great question of difference between two great parties, now struggling for mastery, and the assumption that there could be no protection to the country save by the military, and if this should unfortunately ever be believed by the country the republic would be at an end.

Mr. Hill then alluded to persons who had seceded in the South and gone North to deliver lectures on the subject of Southern wrongs and outrages, their statements being grossly exaggerated and referred to those who instigated the movement of the negroes to Kansas, and said the South had been maligned in a hundred different shapes and forms for the purpose of antagonizing the North and secure the Republicans in possession of power.

He spoke of the persistent attempts to induce the President to veto the bill prohibiting military interference at the polls. He never believed the President would veto the bill. He did not believe the President would lend himself to any such scheme.

The President signalled his administration by removing troops from the South, and therefore he did not believe that the President would lend himself to any such scheme.

He believed he would rise above the clamor of those who were seeking sectional agitation. The Republicans resort to the veto because they want military force to control elections in order to keep themselves in power.

Mr. Hill claimed that the tremendous contest now before the country had its origin and meaning in the purpose of the Republicans to obtain absolute control of the States by force in order to perpetuate their power, whether the people are willing or not, and in furtherance of their purpose almost every Republican speaker has been seeking to impress the country with the idea that danger is to come from what they call Confederates in Congress.

Mr. Hill continued at some length in defence of the South and her representatives, and referred to his own actions during events connected with the first movement toward secession. He spoke of Virginia's proclamation for a peace conference, and how he hoped for its success. Some States had then gone out and therefore could not participate in such a convention, but they watched every movement with interest. Those very men who made charges of infidelity against Southern people went to Washington to defeat the purposes of Va. In proof of this he read the following letter:

WASHINGTON, February 11th, 1861.
My Dear Gov. Gov. Bingham and myself were telegraphed to you on Saturday at the request of Mass. and New York to send delegates to the peace or compromise Congress. They admit that we were right and they were wrong; that no Republican State should have sent delegates that they are here and cannot get away. Ohio, Ind., and Rhode Island are coming in and there is danger of N. Y. and Nev. They beg us for God's sake, to come to their rescue and save the Republican party from rupture. I hope they will send still-backed men or none. The whole thing was got up against my judgment and will end in this smoke. I hope, as a matter of fact, that you will send the delegates.

Truly your friend,
Z. CRAWFORD.
To His Excellency Austin Blair.

OVER THE CABLE.

Yesterday's Record in the Old World—A Chinese Legation at Madrid, &c.

LONDON, May 10.—The Times financial article this morning says: "Value of money remains at about 14 per cent. Attention is being drawn to the probable effects of the continuance of cold northerly winds upon agricultural prospects which are already sufficiently unfavorable. Unless a change occurs soon in the temperature there can be little or no fruit, and there may probably be a serious deficiency in cereal crops, which means larger payments than usual to foreign growers, and eventually dearer money. Prominent among other prospective deficits which are being discussed, they will be able to present a complete account of the policy and its result. At present it is in process of execution between Europe and Asia, and its bearings cannot be fully estimated. A few months more will show what has been the real value of the Berlin treaty and measures concerning Afghanistan. The Government will remain unaltered for at least long enough time to assure the execution of the treaty, and she will not be tempted to evade it by the hope of our policy being altered by a change in Ministry or by an appeal to constituents. The Ministers will be able to complete the work they have begun and we shall be able in a few months to see with some clearness what it is worth."

The Times in a leading editorial says the Government has no intention of dissolving Parliament this year. When the present minority ask judgment of constituents their conduct will be able to present a complete account of the policy and its result. At present it is in process of execution between Europe and Asia, and its bearings cannot be fully estimated. A few months more will show what has been the real value of the Berlin treaty and measures concerning Afghanistan. The Government will remain unaltered for at least long enough time to assure the execution of the treaty, and she will not be tempted to evade it by the hope of our policy being altered by a change in Ministry or by an appeal to constituents. The Ministers will be able to complete the work they have begun and we shall be able in a few months to see with some clearness what it is worth."

The House bill was repealed in relation to the widows of pensioners of the war of 1812 (so as to give pensions to women who are a second time widows). Opposition was made to the bill as an entire change of the pension laws, and on motion of Mr. Garfield it was referred to the Pension Committee.

A bill prohibiting the presence of military at places of election was presented as enrolled and was signed by the Speaker and sent to the Senate for the signature of the President.

The House committee on Public Lands today heard representative Herbert of Alabama in advocacy of the bill introduced by him on the 5th, providing that all public lands of the United States in the timber regions of the States of Alabama, Louisiana and Minnesota which have been subject to entry for as much as 20 years prior to the passage of this act, except such as may have been heretofore recorded for Government purposes, shall be hereafter subject to entry in any quantity desired by purchasers upon the payment of the price required. The measure was referred to a sub-committee consisting of Messrs. Steele of North Carolina, Washburn of Minnesota and Williams of Alabama for consideration and report.

The House resumed the consideration of the Warner Silver Bill. Several bills were introduced and referred, including one for the appointment of a Mississippi river commissioner, and one for the reduction and reorganization of the army and navy. The House at 4:25 adjourned.

Bill to prohibit military interference at elections was sent to the Executive Mansion this afternoon for the approval or disapproval of the President.

The House Committee on Levees and Improvement of Mississippi river held a meeting today. The measure under consideration was that introduced on the 5th, by Gibson, of Louisiana, creating a commission to consist of five members, to be known as "The Mississippi River Improvement Commission." The third section of the bill requires the commission to report in full to Congress the amount of the improvement of the river and the construction of works they may deem necessary that would permanently prevent the overflow of such land as is now subject thereto along the route of said river, caused, objection, and the question arose as to the objects of this and all other measures before the commission, which propose the improvement of the river and reclamation of alluvial lands as coequal objects to be attained. The Republican members of the commission asserted their opposition to the consideration of any provision excepting that which may refer directly to the subject of improving navigation of the river. They contended that the reclamation of alluvial lands was a matter not only impolitic but improper to be considered by Congress. In view of this diversity of opinion the leading Democratic members of the commission will endeavor to prove the bill, which will tend to harmonize and meet the approval of the entire commission.

Gibson introduced in the House previous to adjournment to-day, a very materially modified proposition, which will be presented and referred to the commission for action.

There are good reasons for stating that the President has changed his views regarding the bill relating to the use of the military at the polls, and the probabilities are now strong that he will return it with another veto message.

Representative White, of North Carolina, to-day reintroduced for re-consideration the bill on Military Affairs the Burnside bill of last session pending for reduction and reorganization of the United States Army, and making rules for its government and regulation.

The court held that the contracts and settlements were authorized by law and that all actions of the Board of Public Works, and General Johnson and his associates, were legal and proper and that their conduct of business of the State, had been open, fair, and public, and their proceedings had been reported from time to time to the board and recorded among their records and approved by them. The bill was therefore dismissed and a decree to that effect entered.

Fire in St. Louis.
ST. LOUIS, May 10.—A fire in the warehouse of Carruthers & Co., of St. Louis, this afternoon, and destroyed that building and its contents, and also the warehouse of Yeom & Co., and the old passenger depot of the Ohio and Mississippi railroad company. The building contained about 3,000 barrels of flour, belonging to Kehlor, Brothers, and Empire Milling Company of this city, and a large amount of general produce, buggies, and carriages and wagon material. There were also burned about a dozen empty cars on the track of the Ohio and Mississippi railroad, and some twenty five cars loaded with hay and agricultural implements, and thirty cars of coal. The value of the property in Carruthers & Co.'s warehouse was between 40,000 and 50,000 dollars, and the total loss will reach nearly 100,000 dollars. A large part of the property was in transit, and insured. Seven box-cars belonging to the Chicago and Alton road were burned.

An Archbishop Senator.
HAVANA, May 10.—The Archbishop of Santiago, de Cuba, has been elected Senator from that province.

Speech of Gen. Vance.
That was an excellent speech made by Gen. Bob Vance—let us call him Bob, we like it, and he likes it—in the House last Wednesday. He talked on Silver, but he drifted into patriotism and fraternal love before he got through. His financial views are sufficiently indicated by the following short passage:

"What was the effect of the demonetization of silver? It was to establish a single standard of value and that standard gold. I do not hesitate to say that gold is not the money of the people, and never can be. Gold is a royal money; gold is not a money that can be obtained by the laboring masses of this country. Silver is the money of the people; silver is the money they have been accustomed to from time immemorial. The single standard of gold was therefore a contraction measure, fraught with disaster to this great country of ours. * * * Gentlemen need not be scared at the idea of having too much money. The Government can issue as much of the standard silver dollar of 1873 as it pleases. Unrestricted. Let the people of the country come in with their silver and have in coined. * * * We ought, as speedily as possible, to provide for recoining such coins as have been discredited by the action of the Secretary of the Treasury."

Towards the close of his speech, Gen. Vance warmed up and said:

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. Garfield] the other day said in his speech on the Army bill, making, as I think, a somewhat unkind allusion—I do not see him in his seat, but I have nothing personal to say; I never do anything of that kind—that the South had first attempted to shoot the Government to death, and that now the proposition was to starve the Government to death. Mr. Speaker, there is much more danger, in my opinion, of destroying this Government by injustice and by class legislation than there is of apprehending from the men of the South starving the Government to death. A friend beside me remarks that there is much more danger of the Government starving the people to death. That puts it just the other way. But it is not the Government that is starving the people to death. It is not the Government, it is those who have the control of the legislation. The Government is good. The Constitution is good. The spirit of liberty that lives in people, that animates their hearts, the love of country that is developed by the fire-side as the mothers of the land take their little ones upon their knees and teach them the great lessons of human liberty—all these are good. The Government is good; thank God for the Government—the Government established by our fathers! It is not the Government that is doing the mischief; it is the laws that have been passed by those in authority that are crushing the life out of the people. The gentleman talks of starving the Government to death. Why, sir, if he would come down to my country and go into my Sunday school the children there would teach him a better philosophy than that. They would teach him that nothing can die. They would teach him what Bulwer has so sweetly expressed:

"There is no death! The stars go down To use upon some fairer shore, And bright in heaven's jeweled crown They shine forevermore."

There is no death! The dust we tread Shall change beneath the summer showers To golden grain or mellow fruit, Or rainbow-streaked flowers."

There is no death! The leaves may fall, The flowers may fade and pass away; They only wait through wintry hours The coming of the May."

Edenton Clarion: On Thursday evening last a large number of ladies and gentlemen from Washington, N. C., and other places visited our town on the steamer Oriole. All seemed to be enjoyment and nothing but gayety tickled the hour, when an announcement of the fact that their steamer had been seized for violation of law, in bringing more passengers than allowed by the inspector's certificate put a sudden quietus on the lively scene. The proprietors state that they had applied for a permit and that it was denied at Franklin. They are confident of adjusting it soon.

Salisbury Watchman: The average Republican thinks the government owns him a living, and that he is a wronged fellow-citizen if it is not paid to him in lands or mules or negro votes. There was a rusty old chap (white) of this stripe in town on Monday for the purpose of applying to the County Commissioners for a pension, dating his claim back to 1812. In answer to a question, he said he was not a soldier in that war, but was only a little boy; but that he went with his father to the big road between Salisbury and Concord to see Capt. Kridler's Company in camp, when they were going to the war.

Charlotte Democrat.

Our Raleigh friends sometimes talk very pleasantly and correctly in their columns about a North Carolina system of internal improvements and the duty of building up North Carolina ports and cities, but then they turn right round and praise Richmond and Norfolk, and spoil all their fine spun theory by advising people of the cleverness of Richmond and Norfolk merchants. During a few weeks past Richmond has been the theme (in view of a free excursion to that city) in the meantime, the F. F. V.'s sneer at us as a strip of land between two States. That "strip of land" has done much to build up Charleston and Richmond and Norfolk, although it gets no credit in the statistical reports for its products.

Asheville Journal: On Sunday, the 27th ult., Grant Love, a mulatto about twenty-five years of age, outraged a white girl by the name of Watson, residing about two miles from Webster. The girl upon whom the horrible deed was perpetrated was only about eleven years of age. On Monday night a crowd of young men were preparing to go in pursuit of the negro who committed the villainous deed when William H. Frizzell, a young man who was very highly esteemed, dropped a pistol and shot himself fatally.

Greensboro Patriot: Thieves are getting bold in this burg. Last Friday night Mr. Geo. Yates entered his store, which had been previously closed for the night, about 10 o'clock, and was in the act of lighting a cigar when a pistol banged and a ball passed through his hat. He saw the figure of a man in the rear of the store, and drawing his pistol shot, when the thief darted through the back door, through which it is supposed he had effected an entrance.

Lenoir Topic: On Monday evening a little child of Mr. William Austin's living in Wittenburg township, Alexander county, in attempting to cross over the creek, fell into the water and floated down a quarter of a mile. The child was found about an hour afterwards lodged on a drift, and though life was not entirely extinct, yet it was too far gone to recover.
