The city could not contain the column, for as it doubled itself and wheeled its platoons behind the hill above the postoffice, the rear was at the State House yard.

The sight of the old battle flags and of the survivors who bore some of them seemed to move and stir the people more than anything. In many instances as the tattered, torn, and defaced emblems were borne by drooping from their staffs, ladies and men too, turned aside to conceal the tears that would come.
