Perilous Night Ride in a Balloon. [From the Cleveland Plain Dealer, Oct. 3.] An exchange informs us that an aeronaut, named Thompson, who ascended recently from Toronto descended safely near this city, the balforonto descended safety hear this city, the bal-loon having been taken by a strong current across the lake. Much anxiety was felt at Toronto, as to Thompson's fate, before the telegram arrived announcing his safe landing. Mr. Thompson gives the following account of this adventure; "The balloon ascended at 4:40 and from the velocity the balloon was travelling at, I soon percived it was foolish to try to descend. It soon became evident to me that landing in Canada was out of the question, and that all arrangements must be made to be driven across the lake. The first thing that struck me was to drop the grapnel to the full extent, 120 feet. This acted as a gride to the distance the balloon might be kent guide to the distance the balloon might be kept above the surface of the water; it being now dark, and, by placing one hand on the rope, the effects of the grapuel striking the water was dis-tinctly felt. With an open bag of ballast on my knee, every time the grapuel struck the water a couple of handsfull of sand were thrown out- and to this plan alone I owe my own preservation and success. The ballast taken was about 350 pounds. For three hours that plan was carried out, and then came on one of the most drenchand merciless rains I have ever felt. I could see fifteen feet before me, and the noise of the in on the balloon and the water was such as to ntirely unnerve me. My hands became numb, and I was drenched to the skin. I now began to erecive my position more acutely, though I dermined not to give up until all the ballast and loveables were gone. The rain was making the alloon heavier every moment, and the ballast as thrown out more freely till about ten o'clock, hen the fatigue overcame me and I fell into a stupfor a tew moments. By this time the balloon ad descended to within six feet of the water, ad instantly out went twenty-eight pounds of allast. The effect of this was that the balloon se to an altitude of a mile, entirely through the in clouds, and then the moon shone brilliantly, and in this position it remained about a quarter fan hour. The effect of the moon shining on he cloud beneath was such as any artist might be roud of. The shadow of the balloon was disnetly to be seen travelling over the rough and neven clouds, giving the idea of a balloon race. Everything now became calm. No longer the hum of the lake or the rain. All was still, but when on the balloon and the water was such as to f the lake or the rain. All was still, but wheher the storm still raged beneath was unknown at the ballon descended, it was evident a change ad come over the scene. The rain had ceased, and the appearance of everything was of the darkest hue; whether it was an under stratum of dark londs coul 1 not be known. Suddenly a glimlonds could not be known. Suddenly a glimner of light was seen for a moment; then with nxious eyes cast down to perceive any object, at ast small squares, with darker margins were learly visible. These proved to be the fields and edges, and they appeared to vanish as quickly sobjects passed when in an express train A own was at last seen, and I heard the sound of nusical insruments. I called out to know where was but the reply was unintelligible. They nowever, saw it was a balloon. About two miles wither on, the grappel and caught in a large oak

About a year ago, an infant in Troy, while playing upon the floor uttered a loud shriek, and on being taken up by its mother was found to have run a needle in the sole of its left foot. MACHINE TO REMOVE CHERRY STONES. An ingenious little machine for removing An ingenious little machine for removing the stones from cherries has recently been brought out in Germany. It consists of a wheel revolving on a horizontal axis, in the periphery of which are depressions large enough to hold one cherry. Each cherry is brought by the revolution of the wheel under a vertical rod, which being suddenly-depressed forces out the stone through a hole in the bottom of the cavity. The rod returns to its original rosition by means of a spiral spring, and at the same time the wheel is rotated through a portion of a revolution so as to bring the next cherry under the pricker. It is stated that the machine is capable of stoning one hundred cherries per minute, and that the fruit is not torn in the operation:
The cherries are fed on to the wheel by a

PRETTY PICTURES TO PLAY WITH.- A Cape Elizabeth lady had the mistortune to lese five $100 Government bonds while on her way to Portland, Me. They were picked up by an ignorant man, who did not know what they were, and carried them home and gave they were, and carried them home and gare them to his children for "pretty pictures." They cut the bonds up, and carefully trimmed the coupons, which they kept to play with. An officer noticed one of these in the hands of an urchin, and asked him where he got it; and following the matter up found that a man had purchased several from the children, giving an apple apiece for them. He continued the search, and succeeded in recovering a considerable number of them. The bonds are supposed to have been destroyed.

B't Maj. Gen. ED. R. S. CANBY: LOUIS V. CAZIARC, Aide-de-Camp and A. A. L. Gen. Freedmen .- Education.

Eagerness to Learn .- S. J. Bowen, Esq. Trustee and Treasurer of colored schools in the District of Columbia, says: "Hundreds of children eager to learn, have been denied the privilege of schools in the past, for the reason that the school rooms were already filled to repletion, and more could not be accommodated."

In Virginia, five thousand persons have applied in vain for school privileges. The Superintendent reports hundreds of places asking for schools. Pupils in some instances travel as far as six miles to attend school.

Rev. F. A. FISKE, State Superintendent in North Carolina, says:

"The interest felt in education among the colored people generally, is constantly deep-ening and widening. The school, in the freedmen's estimation, stands next in importance to the church and the preaching of the gospel, and the teacher next to the preacher.
Indeed he hardly discriminates between them, but feels that both are a necessity—indispensible for his children certainly, if not for himself. As a general thing, therefore, they are disposed, in the depths of their poverty, to subject themselves to the greatest self-denial to secure them."

Illustrations .- "Many instances have come under my notice where the teachers of a selfsupporting school have been sustained till the last cent the freedmen could command was exhausted, and even taxing their credit in the coming crop to pay the bills necessary to keep up the school. In one case the teacher himself, a colored man, receiving no salary, advanced the pay for his own board, trusting his patrons to remunerate him for the money advanced when they might obtain the means, which actually was done. Their feeling was that the school must go on for the sake of their children, even though in consequense they should suffer from hunger and nsufficient clothing.

"A poor colored man of my acquaintance, who has no family of his own, built a log school house with his own hands, and hired a teacher on his own responsibility, in order that his neighbors' children, in the depth of their poverty and ignorance, might enjoy the benefits of a school.

Another colored man in Alamance county, depending upon his daily labor for subsistence, hired a building at a rent of four dollars per month, and paid it himself till relieved by the Bureau, in order to establish a school in his neighborhood.

The Superintendent in South Carolina gives the following interesting incident:

Without her dinner .- "I was much touched by hearing the other day the story of a little girl who is discovered to have repeatedly gone without her dinner, in order that she might pay her school tax. She is one of the 'mudderless,' and her grandmother who cares for her is very poor. She had no money for little Mary and a little brother, scarcely enough to buy their hominy; but they were so grieved at not being able to pay their tax, that she at last told them they might choose between the money and the dinner. They chose the money. When the teacher asked her if she was not hugry, and how she got along without dinner, she said, 'O, we don't mind, for we go to bed soon, and then we forget all about it.' Little Mary Brown, (for this is her name) is only

Superintendent CHASE, of Florida, says "The fact of the freedmen's interest in education is ever appearing under new forms. Old men and women are students, and children are leading them. One boy near Tallahasse, but thirteen years of age, is teaching, at night, a dozen or more grown persons, at fifty cents per month, and has already deposited a portion of his earnings in the savings bank."

Superintendent Burklo, of Alabama, says: "The colored people seem to appreciate as highly as ever the privileges brought within their reach. Parents exhibit no letting down of effort, and there is no abatement in the zeal of pupils. The correct use made of these means is a gratifying fact, and the freedmen fully repay the government for its generous assistance by their unquestioned

LOUISIANA.-CLUB ASSOCIATIONS.-The superintendent says:

"The freedmen are forming church and club associations for the purpose of raising the amount necessary to pay the salaries of teachers. The right of citizenship having been given to all alike, the colored people are generally making, and, with the assistance of others, are willing and anxious to make, every effort for that advancement in the scale of civilization which will enable them to appreciate and enjoy the great boon of liberty so long denied them."

Major S. N. Clark, special inspector of freedmen's affairs in Arkansas, reports; "There are no signs of abatement in the wonderful anxiety of the people to learn, but rather, under the spur of their newly granted rights, an increased desire for knowledge is everywhere manifest,
