WASHINGTON ITEMS.

The return of Secretary Stanton to the War Department was the subject of comment everywhere throughout the city yester-day. At the White House there were ominous flittings about of important personages, who were at different times during the day closeted with the President Besides members of the Cabinet, General Grant, and Lieutenant General Sherman, several well known Senators called, and at a late hour last Senators called, and at a late nour last evening members of the Cabinet were still at the White House. It is quite evident to the most casual observer that the President is tor once in a dilemna. General Grant's prompt obedience to law, by vacating the the question of inothing a Convention, and a majority of the votes cast being in favor of holding such Convention, the delegates elected the majority of the votes cast being in favor of holding such Convention, and a majority of the votes cast being in favor of holding such Convention, the delegates elected the majority of the votes cast being in favor of holding such Convention, the delegates elected the majority of the votes cast being in favor of holding such Convention, the delegates elected the most casual observer that the President is tor once in a dilemna. General Grant's prompt obedience to law, by vacating the office of Secretary of War, which he had held ad interim, staggers and bewilders him. and he does not yet know what to do. No military order was issued yesterday through General Grant either by the President or Secretary of War. At the War Department there were nuperson of the prisoner Lennon which, it is merous calls by men of position and influence. Secretary Stanton received all callers with much cordiality, and the business of the office was transacted as of yore. A number of Congressmen and several prominent citizens called and have private interviews with the Secretary during the day.

At army headquarters there was nothing to interrupt the usual routine of business. The allegation that General Grant has acted in bad faith with the President by surrendering the position he occupied to Mr. Stanton so promptly, is most emphatically denied The commanding general doubtless does not feel like being held responsible for the President's oversleeping himself. In relation to the interviews on Saturday, General Grant says he did say to the President that he had not changed his mind, but at the same time gave the President distinctly to understand that in case he (Grant) received from the Senate an official notification that that body did not concur in the reasons given by the President for Mr. Stanton's removal, he would feel bound, under the tenure of office bill, to at once withdraw from the War Department, and cease his duties as Secretary of War ab interim.

It was generally understood yesterday that Mr. Stanton, following the advice of friends, will not resign, but will retain possession of the office until legally removed.

The disbursing clerk of the War Department denies the statement made in an evening paper, on Tuesday, that Mr. Stanton had drawn his pay for the time he was suspended from office. On the contrary, Mr. Stan-Butler, has given some interesting financial ton does not consider himself entitled to pay for that period under the tenure of office
