(For the Post.) Cousin Bernard.

Cousin Bernard of the "Wilmington Star," Although he twinkles and winkles afar, Once left his home and went to the war, And "kivered" his heels with "rosum and tar." He knew when the fight was hottest and thick, Unless they were tarred, his feet would'nt stick-So like a brave man with musket and tar Cousin Bernard went off to the war.

Now after a while his tar was all gone And Consin Bernard came up to see John McDonald of Chatham It was very short metre With Cousin Bernard-so he made salt-petre And Potash, and stayed from the heat of the war, For Cou in Bernard of the "Wilmington Star" Which twinkles and winkles and glimmers afar, Had lost his musket and used up his tar.

The war was all over-farewell to salt-petre, And Cousin Bernard's a mo-t happy creature, But should it begin, in a month or a day, I learn he has found him a place where to stay; In the Insar e Asylum, sweet Cousin Bernard All happy and crazy and feathered and tarred Will take his abode and keep out o the war, Nor use any more saltpetre and tar.

COUSIN JOHN.

Bob O. Link, to Rice Bird, Esqr. Once more I send you a morceau which I have chanced to spy with my little eye-so I hid it under my wing till it could be Post ed. Who is Cousin Bernard? Did you know before that he is a regular tar heal? Do soldiers put tar on their heels to make them stick when the battle is hot and thick? Would soldiers run away if they didn't stick themselves down with tar? Did this Cousin Bernard sneak out of the war, by pleading that he was a salt-petre manufacturer away up in Chatham County? Who is he any way? Is he the "Devil" of the "Carolinian"? If so, how I do pity him-to be obliged to be the "Devil," of such an almighty man of meanness as that "Carolinian." But do tell-I know nothing.

> Your brother, BOB O. LINK.
