This is of voice, and now on Tuesday, even the old fogy Journal comes out with a long article about it, and, as usual, make a slight thrust at men, upon whose shoulders rest the welfare of this portion of the State. A very few of the colored people made a slight disturbance, but they certainly had as much Large and Enthusiastic Meeting at Piright to applaud when the speakers said something they liked, as the whites had when the eloquent speakers referred in patter in the Precinct was in attendance and thetic tone to the prowess of the "Confederate arms." They employ men to do a certain work, and they get the best they can for the money, but they don't mix fanaticism with business.

In this office are four men who bore arms in the Confederate Army, and they have been with the Post ever since it started, while their places could have been filled in two days, by Northern men. We will venture to say that a Republican printer could not get a sit on a Rebel paper in this State if his politics were known.

The Journal's whine about " penniless adventurers" coming here to "rob us of our property" is very amusing. There is not a Northern man on the County ticket who has brought less than three thousand dollars to this city, and the combined wealth o those gentlemen is over two hundred thousand dollars, and it is Nor in Confederate Donate Berger Berger an Alan Berger

The campaign was opened by the Republican party in this county by a large and enthusiastic meeting, held at Elizabethtown, on Thursday last, which was addressed by Messrs. A. W. Fisher, Fred. F. French, and Geo. W. Price, Jr. While Mr. Fisher was speaking, an invitation was sent to Mr. John A. Richardson, (Conservative) to occupy the stand a part of the time. He at first declined, because, as he said, "he would not be treated with respect." But after Messrs. Fisher and French got through, he concluded to accept the invitation, after having been assured that he would be treated with all respect, and listened to with attention. The Conservatives are hard at work, and are telling all sorts of lies to secure votes or non-action. One absurd lie that one of the prominent members of their party has been telling to poor men is that if this Constitution is adopted, for every dollar of tax they paid last year, they will have to pay ELEVEN DOLLARS this year. If they would tell any kind of a reasonable lie, they might possibly get somebody to believe them, but such absurd lies as this one, I can't see how they can expect any person with a grain of sense to believe them. The people of Bladen are not going to be again deceived by these rebels as they were in 1860, but are wide awake, and begin to see where their interests lie, and we will give the Constitution and the Republican Ticket FIVE HUN-DE'ED MAJORITY.

REVIEW OF THE CONSTITUTION.

RODIIAN AND GAHAGAN

To the People of North-Carolina :

The Convention which met under the Recon struction acts of Congress, to form a Constitu-tion "republican in form" for the State of North Carolina, preparatory to its re-admission into the Union, have finished their labors, and now present the Constitution to the people of the State for their ratification. The undersigned have been appointed to prepare a brief statement of its most important provisions and of the principal changes which have been made in the former system of government.

Under the heads of the LEGISLATIVE DEPART-MENT and SUFFRAGE AND ELIGIBILITY TO OFFICE, the changes which will challenge attention is the giving the right to vote and hold office to all the giving the right to vote and hold office to all the male inhabitants of the State, without regard to race, color or previous condition. This change was inevitable. Without it there can be no return to the Union, no escape from the hopeless ruin which is inseparable from a continuous qualities, particularly on cloth and inuance in our present unnatural condition. But apart from this convincing reason, reflect-ing men must see that a prudent regard for the welfare of both races and for the peace and harmony of society required the extension of the great privilege of voting to the colored people, and just men must admit that all who are expected to bear their share of the manifold-burdens of the government at all times, and to expose their lives for its defence in war, should be allowed a full participation in its direction. A friend of Mr. R., who accompanied him to the stand, when Mr. R. had concluded by the stand of reflecting men a war and of all posterity of which has been freely made against this Constitution, by those who have never seen it, and there were just three men because of reflecting men a war and of all posterity of which has been freely made against this Constitution, by those who have never seen it, and there were just three men because of the stand of the future.

The standard events and fequity, and magnananimity, of the Union people of North Carolina, that in three close of a bloody and devastating civit war, in which wrongs and outrages were endured that can never be forgotten, they have framed a Constitution, in which the wrong of the past are ignored for the people of the future, and all who are now true to their country, are inticated by the services of FEQUERADO. All these assertions are false, as any reader of the constitution will see. All these matters are left now, as they were by the proposed Constitution of 1865, to be requilated by the representatives of the people in the General Assembly. JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT. Experience will soon demonstrate that the charges made in this branch of the government taken altogether, are of great value. Some may doubt the propriety of electing judges by the people. If the people select wisely, no harm can possibly result. The abolishment of the County Courts, rendered necessary a small increase in the number of judges of the Superior Courts; and it may be charged that thereby the new system will be more expensive than the old.
We have considered this well, and we confidently assure the people of North Carolina, that if the General Assembly shall carry out in good faith the idea of the Convention, they will save hundreds of thousands of dellars every year, by the SMITHVILLE, BRUNSWICK CO., increased despatch, cheapness and certainty of the admiristration of justice. COUNTY GOVERNMENT.

The Republican principle of local self-government, which has been so fertile a source of good effects in the North-Eastern and North-Western States, has been applied to the administration of the local affairs of counties and town-ships. These County Legislatures, composed of five Commissioners of each county; will be schools, where the lessons of statesmanship will be learned, which may be afterwards displayed in the government of the State. By these various bodies, almost every man is brought directly to participate in public affairs. It may seem a little awkward at first, but it has approved itself elsewhere, and will do so here.

The Constitution framed by our ancestors in 1776, recognized the value of education. vides for a University and for free public schools for all the children of the State.
