Creek and Cherokce Indians occupied rast territories in what is now Georgia and Alabama, a man named George Galphin, who was a licensed post trader with the Indiana on the frontier, allowed these Indians to become indebted to him in the sum of $48,518,97. Galphin made his claim originally against Great Britain, but under the treaties between that country and the United States, the claim was transfered from the former to ' the latter. Time and again the claim had been urged in Congress, and as of L. In 1848 a law was enacted by Congress providing for a settlement, and in 1850. Samuel Smith, St. Stephe this man Crawford sought and obtained Geo. Three distinguished members of Congress from Georgia, as well as Secretary Crawford who was also from that State, were participants in the swindle. Robert Toombs, Alexander H. of $115,176 424, and Secretary of War Belknap blackmailed the posttraders to the tune of $20,000.
