WILMINGTON, N. C. FRIDAY, MARCH 2, 1877.

JACKASSES.

The sound of the braying of Jackasses is heard in the land. It goeth up from almost every Democratic newspaper, and the jawbones of the street corner orators seem never to weary because of their incessant whickering .-"Tray. Blanch and Sweetheart, little dogs and all, they bark" as they are bidden to do, and excusing the little pups and the aforesaid young jackasses that daily congregate about the doors of drinking saloons, whose courage is guaged and graduated by the number of swills of whiskey they have placed themselves outside of, and who have nothing else to do than loaf around disreputable places, we have in our midst a lot of so called newspapers that constantly make music on harps of a thousand strings, all of which music is conveniently set upon one line, and the expression of it is embraced in the words "fraud and corruption." When we take up a morning paper, our hair is made to stand on end like quills upon the fretful percupine, because of the breathings out of threatenings against the rascally E gut of the Electoral Commission who are so disgraced and degraded as not to see that Tilden is the only man who, as President, could save the country from anarchy and ruin; and if we look at an afternoon paper, cold chills are made to run down our back for fear the fate of the cities of the plain will be ours if we don't fall down and worship the mud calf that the Democratic party has set up in

Now, as we said recently, if there was the least possible amount of originality in any of this constant braying, the jackasses might possibly be entitled to some credit, but we see day by day a constant repetition of ideas that we have read the day before in our exchanges, paraded as originalities and displayed in double leaded editorials. We don't blame the aforesaid papers so much, however, for jackasses always whicker and bray at the same time, and jackdaws and parrots usually discourse the set phrases and words that have been drilled into them by their owners. But is it not time for us to have a rest ness? And who but the veriest dolt would disgrace himself by speaking of Mr. Haves as the "Rogue President"? Who but a man who was himself dishonest and not to be trusted would "villa na who had cheated the American people out of their rights," because they had decided that according to law sen President of the United States by

It seems that political disappointment impels some people to turn over the leaves of their Bible, thinking possibly that they may find some grains of comfort there. fiture in the Florida case is by rehearsing to each other how they were outwitted and deceived by the Republicans, and induced against their better judgment to support the compromise Electoral bill. One explanation of it is was drawn up, and when it was under discussion in both Houses of Congress, the Democrats expected that Judge Davis would be elected by the other four judges as the fifteenth man of the Commission; and on account of their faith in his appointment and their belief that his awards would be in their favor, they supported the bill. At the last moment and just before the bill was passed they say Secretary Chandler and President Grant sent a message to General Logan, who was in Springfield, Ill., directing him, while outwardly Certificate will be issued to one appearing to make a vigorous fight Democrat.
