RUTHERFORD B. HAYES and WILLIAM A. WHEELER, President and Vice-President of the United States.

SOUTH CAROLINA.

THE CLOSING SCENE.
The closing scene of the session at the House of Representatives, on Thursday, March 8, 1877, was a memorable one. The House adjourned at 12 o'clock, after a session of three days. The Speaker, Mr. Schurz, delivered a short address, and the House adjourned until the next session, on Monday, March 12, 1877.

THE NEW CABINET.
President Hayes has designated the following gentlemen as the members of his Cabinet: Secretary of State, John Sherman; Secretary of the Treasury, Carl Schurz; Secretary of the Interior, George W. Menard; Attorney General, David M. Key; Postmaster General, John H. Thees.

THE SOUTHERN QUESTION.
The Southern question is the one which has attracted the most attention during the session. The House has passed several resolutions relating to the Reconstruction of the Southern States, and the Senate has also passed several resolutions on the same subject. The President has also issued several executive orders relating to the Reconstruction of the Southern States.

LOUISIANA.

THE CITIZEN WHO BUYS ANYTHING FOR FAMILY CONSUMPTION IN THIS CITY CAN GET IT ONLY AT SECOND HAND. Eggs, poultry, beef, pork, fish, oysters, vegetables and everything else is gobbled up by forestallers who sell at prices greatly in advance of what the producers get. Wilmington pays dearly for its "middle men."

TO THE PRESS AND THE PUBLIC.—We have just completed arrangements for the publication of the Memoirs of P. P. Bliss, the sweet singer, and victim of Ashtabula. It is prepared by his friend and companion, Major D. W. Whittle, of Chicago, with an introduction by D. L. Moody.

Where It Comes From

The talk about Tilden's popular majority is mere folly. The constitution does not contemplate an election by popular majority. A majority of the electors for the President is the thing that counts. Mr. Hayes has 22 electoral votes, while Mr. Tilden has 184. The difference is 162 votes.

Impartial Decision

Judge Schenk has made an important decision in regard to the witness in the case of the 14th June statute. The witness is not a true witness, and the case is dismissed.

Wanted

Wanted: A man who has always recognized the idea that the elective principle was right. In other words, he contends, as we understand him, that the citizens of the several States who pay the taxes should have the right to choose the off-icers who manage their money.

Every lover of the Union rejoices.

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES

Today Rutherford B. Hayes, President of the United States, stands forth before the world a noble man on whose private or official character no stain or blot or smudge rests. Passing through a political contest more exciting than any heretofore had in this country, made bitter and acrimonious in the extreme by the Democratic party, no charge was brought against him, no act of his raked from the shelves of the past that could bring a blush of shame to his cheeks, or that could demand an apology for him by his friends.
