

VALUABLE.

With the present issue of the Post my connection with it as its editor ceases. Through several campaigns of local interest have I endeavored to maintain the cause of the Republican party...

For those of my brethren of the press and others who have spoken kindly of me and the Post during my newspaper life, thank you. Those who have maligned and spoken evil of me, for the cause that I have espoused, defiance.

I lay down the pen and quill and bow myself out of newspaper life.

THE SOUTHERN REPUBLICANS.

It is impossible to conceal the fact that the Republican party of the reconstructed States bears a sort of provincial relation to the rest of the national party. For more than eight years they have occupied this position.

Now, let us modestly inquire: Are these things as they come about? Are we political juveniles? Are we in a condition of unreliable political allegiance? Can we be trusted? How can we be? It is that all this time the Southern Republicans get the cold shoulder?

country who have... the most intense excitement... will some day demand redress.

We defend and effluence the Republican party of these States. In spite of all that has been said about the southern States...

THE ORPHAN FRIENDS.

We had the following in the Oxford Appeal of the 14th inst. WILMINGTON, N. C., April 3, 1877. Mr. J. H. Mills, Oxford, N. C.

Mr. Morris is individually a friend of the Orphan Work, and I am grateful for his kindness extended to me in Wilmington. But I have been a long time in the matter...

A Lion on the Ramparts. The most intense excitement prevailed at the menagerie grounds...

Several weeks since the animals of the menagerie were placed in temporary cages, while the old ones were renovated and renewed for the coming season.

In the afternoon everything ready, the transfer began, and a number had changed quarters, when the cage for the lion was backed up to his temporary quarters for his turn.

The lion was backed up to his temporary quarters for his turn. The men in charge of the transfer were unusually watchful in their business, especially when they came to the lion...

Mr. Baker's release the lion went back to a corner of the pen and sat down. How to get him now was the question. It was certain death to enter the pen, and there was not a gun of position in the crowd.

was quickly but firmly checked. He is a lion of the same breed, and is a very fine specimen of his kind.

This animal is one of the largest of its kind in the United States, as well as the most attractive. Yesterday was the first time human hands have ever touched him since his capture...

The yak was valued at $2,000, and is one of only four in the United States. A number of the ladies of the city have hazarded procurements of its hair or wool, it being very fine and silky.

The shipmen of American apples to Europe, which was only begun in 1867, is now developing into a large business. From the middle of October up to this time almost every steamer leaving New York for Liverpool or London has carried shippers varying from 500 to 5,000 barrels.

The special novelty in gloves has been recently patented, and for evening wear bids fair to supersede all others. It is made without the slit in the palm of the hand, and is buttoned to the wrist...

The most intelligent dog known—the type-setter. Mexico is teaching out a new and brilliant revolution.

Judging from his card, Peter Greeney is a persecuted innocent. Fortune orphans, financially, are those who have no Pa-no-ma.

Some persons in New York think that the telephone is a novelty for a few minutes, and then a bore. An old Scotch woman recommended a preacher who arrived at the kirk wet through to get at once into the pulpit, "Ye'll be dry enough there."

Mr. Bunker says it is all very well for Mr. Sankey to sing "Are your windows open toward Jerusalem?" but for his part he isn't going to chance taking cold from an influx of east wind at this season of the year.

A friend of mine who has facilities for knowing what transpires in court circles, tells me that the Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne) is a firm believer in Spiritualism, and that during the time when the newspapers were full of most appalling references to Slade, Her Highness summoned him to her side, had numerous sittings with him, and treated him with all manner of consideration.

Propose of Louise, the gossips have not yet done talking of the curious fact that on the opening of Parliament the Princess Louise and Beatrice both drove to Westminster in the Royal coach with the Queen. But of all the lords, knights and gentlemen who took part in the pageant, there was no place, it seemed, which the Marquis of Lorne might fitly occupy.

Long years ago—but this is a bit of exclusive reminiscence known only to a few—the Queen, in the early days of her wedded life, had one of those squabbles with her husband, of the sort which will come about sometimes, even between the most loving married couples. Chagrined and vexed, the Prince retired to his room and locked the door.
