HEAVEN, IS IT FAR AWAY?

WILMINGTON, N. C., MAY 15, 1870.

Oh! Heaven is nearer than mortals think,
When they look with a trembling dread
At the misty future that stretches on
From the silent home of the dead.

'Tis no lonely isle on a boundless main, No brilliant, but distant shore, Where the lovely ones who are called away, Must go to return no more.

No, Heaven is near us: the mighty veil Of mortality blinds the eye, That we cannot see the angel bands On the shores of eternity.

The eye that shuts in the dying hour
Will open the next to bliss;
The welcome will sound in the heavenly Ere the farewell is hushed in this.

We pass from the clasp of mourning friends, To the arms of the loved and lost; And the smiling faces will greet us there, Which on earth we have valued most.

Yet oft in the hours of holy thought,

To the thirsty soul is given

That power to pierce through the midst of To the beauteous scenes of Heaven.

Then very near seems its pearly gates, And sweetly its harpings fall; Till the soul is restless to soar away, And longs for the angels call.

I know when the silver cord is loosed, When the vail is rent away, Not long and dark shall the passage be, To the realm of endless day.

Some twenty years ago a beautiful little church in the West was ready for consecration. On the day appointed the venerable Bishop Chase, with several clergy, was present. Just before going into the church, the bishop had written the "deed of consecration," and, in so doing, had soiled his hands with ink. He did not observe this until after he was in the chancel, and during the progress of the services; and when his eye rested upon his blackened fingers he was apparently much annoyed. He called some of the clergy to his side, and exhibiting the soiled hand, said he must wash it. But he was very heavy and unweildly, and could not get out and in the chancel without great difficulty, and therefore declined going out into the vestry room, where there was a bowl. "Bring the bowl and towel to me," he said. One clergyman ventured to suggest to him, sotto roce, that a wet towel might do as well, and would be less noticed by the congregation. The bishop looked at him over his spectacles and said, "Sir, I never wash my hands cles and said, "Sir, I never wash my hands with a towel." At last the senior warden of the parish was obliged to go out and bring in a bowl of water. And, by a singular coincidence, just as the officiating clergyman was giving out the 21st Psalm—

"I'll wash my hands in innocence
And round thine altar go—"
the bishop dipped his hands in the bowl and washed them. Some of the people of the parish to this day think that this was part of the ceremony of consecration.
