Written for The Dispatch. What's the Use?

(The price of meat goes up higher—News Item.)

Gee, whiz!
Get onto the biz!
Don't think for a minute
The beef trust's not in it.
Its the stuff!
That makes the bluff.
It needs the money
And gets it without honey.
The poor consumers wall,
But the trusties feed on quail.
Wow!
What a row!
Yes, its rough,
Also, darned tough.
Nothing to be done.
It is bound to come.
Its the same old game,
That the people can't tame.
The cards are stacked,
And you're on the rack.
They are handing it to you
Just like they use to do.
Police! Fire!
Prices go higher!
If you want to sup,
You must cough up.
There's only one way,
And the devil's to pay.
Cert, its the deuce!
But, what's the use?

—Fritz.

Before and After.

How plump she was when first we met,
How sweet she was and clever.
The way she hypnotized my heart,
I will forget it never.

How plump she was, and now today
I look at darling Minnie,
And wonder how I love her still,
She is so tall and skinny.

—St. Louis Star.

"Might Have."

I have lived my life, and I face the end—
But that other life I might have led.
Where lay the road and who was its friend!
And what was the goal, where the years were fled?

Where lay the road? Did I miss the turn?
The friend unknown? Our greetings unsaid
And the goal unsought? Shall I never learn
What was that life I might have led?

As the spring's last look, for one dear day
From skies autumnal on earth may bend,
So lures me that other life—but, noy!
I have lived my life, and I face the end.

—Edith M. Thomas.

The Long-Lost Egg.

I.

Flora was a farmer's daughter, and for short they called her Flo, and she lived in Indiana, near the town of Kokomo.

Flo longed with all her fond young heart a millionaire to wed, "I'll never, never get one here!" with tears and sobs, she said.

One day while bringing in the eggs the hens had freshly laid a happy inspiration came to cheer that lonely maid.

The eggs were to be shipped back East for plutocrats to eat, so on the shell of one of them she wrote these words discreet:

"I'm a pretty girl, quite simple in my ways, and I've a dimple And to be a rich man's darling I am dying. Oh, I beg That you'll write to Flo Pasana, Kokomo, in Indiana."

Alas! She could not know the fate of that ill-fated egg!

II.

The egg was shipped with other eggs, all in a big egg crate, and with its sister, brother eggs it met the self-same fate; it landed in a storage house, and there, day after day, it stayed and stayed, while years and years slipped silently away.

And Flo hung on with hopeful heart and waited all in vain, and then at last she tied up to an Indiana swain.

She moved to town. One day some strictly fresh-laid eggs she got from an honest grocer, and that egg was in the lot!

SECURES LIQUOR LICENSE.

Only Development of Whiskey Seizure of Friday Afternoon.

There have been no subsequent developments in the seizure of nearly three barrels of whiskey last Friday afternoon by Deputy Collector Adams, of Raleigh, at the store of D. N. Stanley & Co., Second and Market streets. Particulars of this matter were first carried in the news columns of The Dispatch. United States Commissioner George Harris was approached today and he was asked if Stanley & Co., had taken out a United States retail liquor dealers license. He replied in the affirmative; it is probable that this step will put an end to the matter so far as the Federal authorities are concerned.
