HEALTH WORTH BUSINESS.

Life insurance companies are usually on to their jobs. They are not in the business just for the fun of it. Their business is very largely a matter of life and death—the life and death of their policyholders. If the policyholder lives to pay premiums on his insurance the company wins; if he dies they lose.

Of course, the company wants the policyholder to live, but they don't have so much of an interest in him as the policyholder has in himself, for the simple reason that insurance is rarely written for as much as the risk is worth. That is true even in the case of fire insurance.

But even at that, life insurance companies are taking steps to make their policyholders live longer and pay in more. And what is more, even these shrewd business men claim that it pays. A number of life insurance companies are issuing health literature to their policyholders, some industrial insurance companies have visiting nurses and inspectors, but probably the best feature yet inaugurated in the free yearly medical inspection offered by at least one company to its policyholders.

Now, here is the point. If it pays an insurance company to try to keep a policyholder alive and healthy for the sake of his premium, it would certainly be a gilded investment for the policyholder himself, as well as everybody else, to spend something on health, because each individual has so much more at stake personally than the insurance company.

People who care a rap about their teeth make a trip to their dentist every six months, or every year at least, to have him look their teeth over, clean off the tartar, and fill any little cavities before the whole tooth decays and is lost. Why is it not even more reasonable to go to a doctor at least once a year to have him look after your kidneys, your lungs, and your heart? In most cases, if the doctor finds something going wrong with these organs, he can forestall or entirely avert the impending danger.

When you have a valuable piece of machinery or a mighty engine, how do you care for it? You get a good machinist or engineer to look after it. Then when a piston goes to pounding the head is knocked out, but he hears the little warning, adjusts a few nuts, and all is well. Likewise, if you have a frequent medical examination your doctor will find the high blood pressure and the resisting arteries, and a case of apoplexy is avoided.

By frequent medical examinations diseases can be detected in its earliest stages, where it can be cured by regulation of the diet alone. Neglected, however, it becomes a different matter.

The High Brow.
Oh, his brow was high and polished—
Sort of bugied out at the top;
And he never used bad language,
And he never touched a drop;
Oh, he never, never mingled
With the common herd, so rude;
He despised a husky athlete,
But he dearly loved a dude.
Wore a rubber collar always,
And a white, stiff bosomed shirt;
He was, oh, so intellectual,
At times it almost hurt;
He just doted on "Hen" Ibsen
And his weird and woozy plays,
He would see one and then gabble
About the dismal thing for days.

Couldn't stand for comic op-ras,
Tuneful tinkling things or such
When he heard men parous quipping
It disturbed him very much.
Didn't see the sense of kidding;
Couldn't understand a joke.
All this life-worth-while business
Was to him the saddest bosh.
Loved to sit down in the evening
With some misty, dusty tome.
Couldn't lure him—well, I guess not—
From his happy, happy home.
"Art for art's sake" was his motto,
Every pesky time and place,
Though he didn't know the lady
When he met her face to face.

Prated of the higher strata
Of the astral that and this;
Said he seemed to see old Henrik
Pointing to a deep abyss
Full of ghosts and pickled mummels,
Placed there by his master hand—
Sort of milestones on the journey
To that fair and happy land.
Anyhow, his brow was lofty
And his manner most technique.
Seemed like nature had him branded
As a sort of mental freak.
Worshipped Ibsen and his flub-dub;
Hated Cohan and his tunes.
Do you wonder that the public
Said "That guy is full of prunes?"

Animals That Count.
Nearly everyone has seen trained animals that "count", or at least give the impression that they can count. Most of these are performed by signals the trainer makes which are understood by the animals. The gesture of a hand, the tone of voice, the stamping of the foot, and various other signals will enable a horse or other animal to pick out the number wanted, or stop "counting" at a given number, the counting being done by taps of the hoof. But there are untrained animals that can count, and not up to the ordinary six or twenty numbers that about limit their ability in shows. Rather they can count to thirty or one hundred.

In some of the mines of Hainault horses are used to haul loads of ore over a little roadway and back by another route, as the tunnels are narrow. Thirty such trips constitute a day's work for the horse, and without a word from the drivers, these horses will start for the great incline that leads to their stable at the end of the thirtieth trip. In fact, many of the drivers do not keep account of the trips at all, knowing the horses will do so, and when at the end of the thirtieth trip the horses wheel suddenly and make for the outlet, these drivers have to jump and loosen the catches that hold the tugs to the little cars.

But even this is beaten by oxen. "The stupid ox" has become a well-known phrase the word over, and yet, according to Montague, the oxen employed in the royal gardens of Susa to turn the wheels to which water pails are attached, absolutely refused to do more than 100 rounds, as that was their day's work. This work consisted in having the oxen travel in a circle, keeping the water-drawing wheel in motion, and without fail, on the 100th trip around the circle the oxen would stop. Nor could they be urged to make another round.

It is said that wild apes can count to four, and in order to hunt them at least five hunters go out and four leave the place in a manner that will attract the apes. After the fourth hunter has gone the apes will come out and are thus secured, but they will never go out from their cover until four hunters have been seen leaving the place. The same is also claimed by naturalists for rooks and magpies.

Paterson, N. J., April 30.—With the arrests of Miss Elizabeth Gurley Flynn and William Haywood, Industrial Workers of the World agitators, the textile strike situation here became more serious. They were indicted by the grand jury, charged with disorderly conduct, and were released on bail. Miss Flynn addressed a meeting of 15,000 strikers at Halenden, whose Socialist mayor has given the agitators permission to hold public meetings whenever they want to, and urged the men and women to take more active means to induce the strike breakers to quit. The situation was so tense that further rioting was expected at any moment.

NOTICE OF ELECTION FOR SCHOOL BONDS FOR PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.
Notice is hereby given that pursuant to Chapter 494, of Public Local Laws of 1911, and pursuant to the resolution of the Board of Education of New Hanover County, and an order of the Board of Commissioners of New Hanover County, there will be an election held in all the precincts of New Hanover County on the 27th day of May, 1913, between the hours of sunrise and sunset on the day for the purpose of having the voters of said county pass upon the question "Shall New Hanover County issue its coupon bonds not to exceed the sum of $175,000 and levy a special tax for public school improvements in said County?"
In pursuance of said Act, a new registration has been ordered for all the precincts of said county, and all parties voting in said election will be required to register anew before the election. All qualified voters desiring to cast their votes in favor of said bonds will vote a ballot with the following words printed or written thereon: "Against Public School Bonds." All qualified voters who desire to vote against said bonds will vote a ballot with the following words printed or written thereon: "Against Public School Bonds." In the event a majority of the qualified voters of said county voting at said election cast their votes in favor of said bonds, then five per cent bonds will be sold and issued in an amount not to exceed $175,000, and a special tax levied to pay the interest thereon, and create a sinking fund to retire the bonds when they become due.
Under the terms of the Statute the proceeds from the sale of said bonds after paying for the expenses of the election shall be applied and expended by the Board of Education, in its discretion, for the purchase of sites and the construction and repair of permanent school houses, and equipping the same for school purposes, in such localities in the said County of New Hanover, as the said Board of Education may select for the accommodation of the children of said county; and also to reimburse the public school fund of said county for the amount already expended since the first of June, 1910 in building school houses, etc.

The registration books for the purpose of registration shall be open at the respective polling places in said County on the 24th day of April, 1913, at 9 o'clock A. M., and closed on the 17th day of May, A. D. 1913, at sunset, and the said registers will remain at the polling places on the Saturdays during said period from 9 o'clock A. M. until sunset, for the purpose of registering all parties who desire to register, and are qualified for registration, and on other days than Saturdays voters may register when and where it is convenient. For the purpose of holding said election the following registrars and poll-holders are appointed:
