Forest Gady, the sterling young backstop of the Boston Red Sox, who is one of Bill Carrigan's most valuable aides in attempting the American League pennant, but humbled the New York Giants in the world's series.

BUNTS

Pitcher Gady of the Phillies is laid up with a broken rib. The peculiar thing is that he does not know when, where, why or how he got it.

Chas. P. Taft says he has no intention of giving up the Cubs. Neither did Murphy, but that's different.

The Giants have released to Jersey City a man by the name of Pfyl. O. piffle!

Boston Nots. have released to Macon, Ga., Octavia Gonzales and Angel Villason. Perhaps it's a misprint. It might have to Huerta's Mexico Clay aggregation. Sounds that way.

Ty Cobb last Monday had batted just .286, while Joe Jackson had connected for .45.

Chance's New York Americans are a real team this year. Walter Johnson, the premier pitcher, professes a great respect for them.

"Buck" Herzog, now managing Cincinnati, formerly with the Giants, says Chief Myers, the big Indian catcher, is an ordinary bonehead without superior mechanical ability. Without eternal vigilance on the part of McGraw, he says, the big 'un would be the laughing stock of ball-dom.

There are 13 Cubans playing in organized ball in this country.

Cy Seymour once hit a home run from Boston to New York. The pellet fell on a passing freight train and was found in the big cillage by a brakeman.

The Detroit Americans will train next year at Hot Wells, Tex., having eschewed Gulf Port, Miss., where they trained this spring.

If some players, and a great many other men, as for that, had more bone in their spiral columns and less in their heads, you'd notice a difference.

PHILS ARE SLUGGERS Editor of Sporting Life Takes a Squint at Dooiin's Clan

The much-talked-of riddling of the Phillies by the Feds has not had the effect on the team of making it a contender for the tail-end place is the opinion of Editor Richter, of Sporting News. An excerpt from his article follows:

"They have started the pennant race with a sweep against the Giants, and the capture of the first game with the rejuvenated Boston, the Phillies thus at the end of the first week of the season showing in front with a clean record of victories. It is not likely that the Phillies can long maintain their present pace, as their undoubted weakness in the pitching department is sure to make itself felt, soon or late, but the start that they have made will serve to buoy them up against the day of adversity, whereas a bad start would probably have had such a demoralizing effect that recovery would have been very slow, if not altogether out of the question. Moreover, events to date have warranted hope of better pitching than appeared probable at the start, and have also given assurance that the infield may have been plugged up better than seemed possible a few weeks ago. Byrne has been playing a game at second base equal to Knabe at his best, and if he can keep up his present speed and accuracy when the grounds become faster under the sun's rays, second base will be better filled than ever, as Byrne is superior to his predecessor in batting. The infield problem is still unsettled, though young Murphy is giving promise of being able ultimately to do more than rattle around in Doolan's shoes. He covers considerable ground, handles grounds well, and throws hard and accurately. In batting he has not as yet come up to the promise of his minor league record; but he has the action of a good batsman. So, all things considered, the Phillies are not as badly shattered as had been supposed and they have to date given every indication of being much more than a stop gap, by reason of their undeniable batting strength. Their slugging ability was demonstrated in the opening game with the Champions Tuesday, when they mauled Marquard for 12 hits, including two homers by Captain Megee, and sent the Giants off the field badly defeated, 10-1. After two days of idleness the Phillies showed that their initial victory was no fluke by again outplaying the Giants at all points, and with the aid of young Mayer's effective pitching, defeating them, 3-1. On Saturday Marshall also made his debut with a 5-3 victory over Boston, but his task was made comparatively easy by the hard hitting behind him, the Phillies knocking Perdue out in six innings, with 10 solid drives. The Boston series ends on Tuesday, and then the Phillies go to New York to help the Giants open the season at the Polo grounds with a four-game series, after which four game series will be played at Brooklyn and Boston.
