SAYS HIS SUCCESS HINGES ON HEALTH

Douglas Fairbanks Appreciates Happiness Also. Good Work of Peplac Increasing.

"Douglas Fairbanks, whose smile and athletic ability have won the admiration of millions of movie fans," quoted as having said: "To my mind health and cheerfulness are the greatest assets one can have."

"And, to my mind, Mr. Fairbanks has hit the nail square on the head," continued Mr. Burke. "Where good health is lacking it is hard to find happiness. This fact is clearly illustrated many times daily in various neighborhoods right here in this city."

At the present time Mr. Burke is in attendance daily at Elvington's Drug store and no obligation should be felt on the part of any man or woman who wishes to learn more about Peplac.

THEATRE

Sidney Carton and Charles Darnay at the Royal in "A Tale of Two Cities."

"It's the hardest characterization I have undertaken yet," said Mr. Farnum. "I am used to playing a character by throwing myself into his mood; but in playing two parts, thus, I have to be constantly changing mood, always ready to throw myself into either of the roles. And, believe me, it is no easy task."

Mr. Farnum set to work by accurately characterizing each man, and figuring what gestures and mannerisms each of them would have. These are called "tricks" by actors. That is what Mr. Farnum taught himself—the "tricks" of each character, the little bits of action which would serve as distinctive characteristics.

Stuart Holmes appears in an entirely new type of role in his latest production for William Fox, "The Broadway Sport," at the Grand tomorrow. Those who have hissed and hated Mr. Fox plays, who have pitied him as the repentant pastor in "The Scarlet Letter," and who have sympathized with him as the outcast in "The Derelict" have novel sensations in store for them when they see Stuart Holmes as a spectacled, awkward small town gawk.

Not even his boss's tyranny can crush the latent villainy in Holmes. It flares forth in all its glory when he robs a couple of crooks of the money they extracted from the mill safe. "Visions of what he could do on Broadway with that roll prove too much for his honesty and thereby hangs the story. Suffice it to say that when Holmes plants his No. 12's on the Great White Way he sets a pace which leaves the veteran habitués gasping for breath."

"THE GIRL FROM RECTOR'S." Ruth McTammany, as "The Girl from Rector's," in the new five-reel Mutual feature of that name, possesses the piquancy and charm that are essential to success of the part she plays—that of Louie Sedaine, an innocent young French girl with a wonderful talent for dancing, who has invaded New York in an effort to win fame and fortune by her art.

FREE OF CHARGE. Any adult suffering from cough, cold or bronchitis, is invited to call at the drug store of Chas. F. Green and get absolutely free, a sample bottle of Becher's German Syrup, a soothing and healing remedy for all lung troubles, which has a successful record of fifty years. Gives the patient a good night's rest free from coughing, with free expectation in the morning.

A LITTLE FOOD FOR THOUGHT

It is my pleasure to know a middle-aged woman who devoted her fortune and time to a home for girls in New York. The sensible girl is not particularly invited to live in this home. It is maintained for those most likely to become wayward. Time and time again her friends have asked her why she didn't devote her time to the girls who had not already fallen under the temptations of the city— to those who were still traveling the straight path, saying she was wasting her efforts and fortune on worthless girls.

Somehow, I never quite realized the truth of her words and the depth of her wonderful work until the other day. I was sitting in my motor outside one of New York's big shops waiting for a friend who was doing a bit of shopping inside to join me when I noticed a flashily and cheaply dressed girl talking to another girl on the corner. A shabbily dressed old woman tottered up to her and asked directions to get to an address she had written on a piece of paper. The girl stopped her conversation immediately and after reading the address walked with the poor old soul to the car tracks which ran in front of the store.

When I repeated this experience to my welfare worker-friend she assured me that most of these girls possess hearts of gold and that they will give from their scanty hoard to help another, more unfortunate than themselves, when it means the greatest sacrifice. And yet—we wrap our robes of holiness about us and feel that those who have fallen through their weakness are inferior to us. Where we hold scorn there should be nothing but the greatest of pity.
