Member Audit Bureau of Circulations. THURSDAY, SEPT. 20, 1917.

It looks like the Senate and House never will get together on the war tax bill.

Some of the State papers are beginning to talk about it as the King "murder case."

Miss Rankin, the lone woman member of Congress, is to make an address at the State fair, it is said. She surely will be a drawing card for the fair.

Col. W. H. Osborn retires from government service conscious of faithful performance of duty and with the people's encomium, will don the good and faithful servant.

The people are promised a reduction of a cent and a half a pound in the price of sugar by the first of next month. If that is brought about the most skeptic will begin to believe in Mr. Hoover.

It is said the War Department is preparing to have the American soldiers instructed in the Japanese art of jiu jitsu. It must expect their fighting in France to be chiefly of the hand-to-hand kind.

The public is told one day that it need not fear a coal famine this winter, and the next day it is scared most to death by the harrowing reports of the immense shortage in the output of the mines.

That fellow who said if he was drafted he would poison as many of the troops as he could by putting poison in the bread (he is a baker and would serve in that capacity if drafted) was, no doubt, more fool than nave. Still he should be made to suffer for his folly.

Says The Fayetteville Observer: "Query. Why does Uncle Sam pay for service from all other sources while at the same time he sends to the newspapers his important calls for civil service examinations and other information, with the request that they be published, not as advertisements, but merely as news matter?" Because he expects the newspapers to "do their bit," and most of them are willing to do it.

Col. Alex. J. Feild, the new State Librarian, who is also editor of The State Journal, announces that the duties of the position will not interfere with his work on the paper. In fact, he says, he can make his paper of decided value to the library by giving the latter publicity and bringing it closer to the people for whose benefit it exists, which is no doubt true. The State library has not occupied the position it should have done with the public in the past. We believe Colonel Feild's appointment will in great measure rectify this. In choosing him the Governor made a wise selection.

The Courier Journal puts its stamp of approval on the President's declaration that the United States will not treat with the German Emperor in these words: "If the German people want peace badly enough to prepare for it by creating a responsible government, they can get it. As long as they will not prepare for peace by the only means that would make it practical they will get war in ever-increasing intensity. The President holds out an olive branch to the Germans, but not to the Kaiser. America will not mistake for real government by the Germans any modification of the imperial government which leaves the Emperor in actual control." Whereupon The Greensboro Daily News remarks that the sooner the German people understand this the better it will be for them.

EDISON'S MYSTERY MACHINE.

Now and then people hear something about a wonderful machine of some kind that Mr. Edison is building at his plant in Orange, N. J. It is said to be an instrument of war of some character. Its character or for what purpose it is to be used no one knows. The greatest mystery surrounds the whole affair. It is said the men at work on the machine never leave the building in which they are at work and never hold communication with the outside world.

In this connection The Herald, of Dillon, S. C., announces that Mr. Rod Carmichael, of that town, has become one of the mechanics at work on this secret machine. In a letter to his mother announcing his new employment he said he would virtually be a prisoner for several months. This isolation of the men at work on the machine is in order to keep absolutely secret the nature of the work in which they are engaged. Because of the hardships and the qualifications of the men they are paid fifteen dollars a day, it is said. As they can't get out to spend their wages, some of them will have pretty good bank accounts when they have completed their work.

No one knows what the machine is intended to do. It is understood, however, that it is for use against the German forces, the general impression being that it is intended to clear the ocean of submarines.

RINGS CLEAR.

The following signed editorial in The Commoner rings clear:

"The constitution—our organic law—vests in Congress the right to declare war—and Congress has declared a state of war to exist. The constitution makes the President commander-in-chief of the army and navy, and the President is directing the war on land and sea.

The constitution gives to Congress the right to levy taxes and to borrow money, and Congress is doing both.

The President and Congress were elected by the people and are responsible to the people; they speak for the people—the people have no other spokesmen. Acquiescence in the will of the people, expressed through their authorized representatives, is the first law of republics. There is no alternative but anarchy. Before the government acts discussion is proper; after action obedience is a duty.

Mr. Bryan did all he could to prevent the war. We are glad to know that he feels now, that war is on, that it is no two-sided matter; that the people's representatives should have the united support of the people in its conduct. It is a pity that earlier in the contest Mr. Bryan saw fit to hamper the administration as much as possible. His course had much to do with convincing Germany that the United States would not in any circumstances enter the war; that it would submit to any injustice, indignities and violation of rights rather than go to war.

Mr. Bryan would have done his country much greater good had he stood with the administration, of which he formed a part, and the large majority of the people in the crucial days of 1916. But we are glad to hear such sentiments from him as the above. They ring clear for Americanism.

From the precautions taken by the military authorities at the Spartanburg cantonment there seems to be reason to believe those in charge have fear that efforts to blow up the waterworks or poison the water will be made. The chief engineer is quoted as saying, "the chief danger is that the poison might be introduced into the sluices through which water reaches the pumps." He further said that poisoning the water might be attempted. Electric lights have been placed at all points where opportunity existed for such dastardly work and other precautions taken to prevent it. These precautions followed the discovery of men lurking in the swamp near the works for three successive nights, who fled when hailed. The government should make short shift of any men caught in the attempt either to poison the water or blow up the works. Lennyency would be a crime in such case.

The present prosperity of the country and the large amount of money in circulation constitute danger for the near future. Money easily come by is quickly spent. The danger is that many persons, relying upon their continued prosperity and not realizing the possibility of distressing shortage in foodstuffs in the near future, will not lay by any funds for those days when prices of food will be even higher than they are now. Unless the people are conservative in their spending now they may find the present prosperity has been harmful to them rather than beneficial. That prices of all articles of food will be higher cannot be doubted by any one. In the near future the cost of living will be much greater than at present. If there ever was a time when people should lay by for a rainy day it is the present.

WITH THE EDITORS.

Greensboro News.—The editor and managing editor of the Philadelphia Tageblatt may also learn what it means for this country to be at war.

Winston Sentinel.—Judge Jeter C. Pritchard is doing a most effective work in the present war crisis through his addresses on the situation and his appeals to men of all creeds and political and other affiliations to do their utmost in support of the government at this time. Wherever he has spoken his addresses, like those of Mr. James H. Poy, have resulted in great benefit.

Greensboro News.—Whatever else may happen in Russia, and anything is possible save the return of the Romanoffs, one thing is certain—the theory that the best thing for Russia was unlimited license for all classes to voice their extreme opinions as to how the country was to be run has failed to work. In other words, the well-meant indulgence of a new government that itself was at sea resulted months ago in such confusion and violence, such a babel of violent tongues, that one does not even have to invent the bugaboo of German intrigue to explain the desperate state of things that is the outcome of such folly.

STATE NEWS.

Mr. Hall Wilson is experimenting with sea island cotton at his farm near town. He planted six rows in the spring and it is being watched with interest by many. Some of the stalks are now more than seven feet high and very full of bldoms.—Monroe Enquirer.

Women can serve now by showing their approval of the patriotism of the soldiers going through Greensboro to the mobilization camps. Mrs. Aubrey L. Brooks said last night. She is calling upon the 85 women of the city and county who registered in the National League for Woman's Service for cantonment duty, when needed, to take advantage of the opportunity by meeting the troop trains at the station and helping the soldiers in every way they can.—Greensboro News.

The committee on live stock for the fair is hard at work, and are meeting with much encouragement in their efforts to have a splendid array of high grade and pure blooded live stock in exhibit at the fair. The people of Eastern Carolina have shown a keen interest in better live stock during the past year. The Packing plant, soon to be in operation in New Bern, will be a great factor in furthering this interest and departure from the ordinary routine of farming. Live-stock committee hopes to secure a large number of registered cattle, hogs and sheep and if possible arrange for an auction sale of them during the last day of the fair, or immediately following the fair.—New Bern Sun-Journal.

Strong on Lawyers. The editorial and news staff of The Wilmington Dispatch, because of the removal of some and the drafting of others, has undergone a reorganization. General Manager W. E. Lawson continues to have general control over the news and editorial departments, but he will have as new members of the staff, Samuel T. Ashe, Walter N. Keener and Louis Goodman. Three lawyers. Truly The Dispatch is setting a pace.—Asheville Times.

A Growing Newspaper. The Wilmington Dispatch has made a number of changes in its staff recently, some of these being caused by the war. The changes, however, have not lowered at all the high standard maintained by the Wilmington paper. Indeed, it is going ahead constantly and is a publication of which Wilmington people have every reason to be proud.

There is particular local interest here in the growth of The Dispatch because of the fact that the general manager and managing editor, Mr. W. E. Lawson, was formerly a popular newspaper worker of this city. He has many friends here who rejoice in the success he is achieving in Wilmington.—Winston-Salem Sentinel.

Dispatch Staff Changes. The Wilmington Dispatch announces that it has completely reorganized its editorial staff. From a prospectus we have seen, The Dispatch has a fine bunch of literary highlights and should present the news of the world to Wilmington with dispatch.

W. E. Lawson, who has been general manager and managing editor of The Dispatch since a reorganization last year, continues in that capacity; Samuel T. Ashe, one of the best newspaper men of the State, succeeds James H. Cowan as editor-in-chief; Walter N. Keener, who was formerly editor of this paper, becomes news editor; Ira F. Cates, of Durham Herald fame, is city editor, and Louis Goodman becomes a reporter, thus forsaking fame as a lawyer. The reorganization gives The Dispatch three lawyers on its staff, and it is certain that they will either get it in a lot of trouble or keep it out of trouble.—High Point Enterprise.

Its Quota Filled. Along with many other newspapers The Wilmington Dispatch was hit by the war by the loss of men who went to the front. It has now filled its vacancies and Managing Editor Lawson announces that his paper has a staff that will give the people of Wilmington and the Wilmington section the sort of paper they are looking for. The Dispatch is an excellent sheet aggressively managed. It is especially agreeable to know that Mr. Samuel T. Ashe, who has lived in Raleigh a number of years and is well and favorably known here, is in charge of the editorial side of The Dispatch. He will give Wilmington a strong, reliable afternoon paper.—Raleigh News and Observer.

Newspaper Changes. The Wilmington Dispatch announces a reorganization of staff with Mr. Sam T. Ashe as editor, and Mr. W. E. Lawson as managing editor, and with Mr. W. N. Keener as news editor, and with an excellent corps of local editors. Mr. Ashe was at one time connected with The Observer and is well remembered in Charlotte. This writer has known him as one of the ablest editorial contributors in North Carolina. He is one of the class who puts forward their own views rather than merely giving reflection to the views of others. The Observer believes The Dispatch has done an excellent stroke of business in placing him in the editorial chair.—Charlotte Observer.

Infantile Paralysis in Chicago. (By Associated Press.) Chicago, Sept. 20.—There are 139 cases of infantile paralysis under observation in Chicago today, according to Health Commissioner John Dill Robertson, who said the disease shows "unmistakable signs of spreading."

The commissioner said that 50 per cent of the children affected with the ailment have died. In the last four days 20 children have died from the disease.
