NEW YORK LETTER.

(Special Correspondent of The Dispatch).

New York, April 17.—Some little guy.

With a bulging forehead. Receding chin. And tortoise glasses. And camouflaged brain. Has invented a new jag. Made out of coal tar. All you have to do.

Is smear a bunch of it. Into a brazier. Cook out a dose of joy juice. Cuddle up in a little bunk. Inhale the magic fumes.

And be translated. Into the realms.

Of Oriental hours.

And there are no. "Next morning" effects.

And it does away.

With spending a week's pay. Dining a chorus girl.

Salving the garcon.

Bribing the maitre d'hotel.

Dodging the wife.

Buying your hat back again.

From the Count at the portoullis.

Scrapping with the taxi magnate.

And things like that.

The new jag is known.

As benzyle benzolates.

And benzyle boozeries.

Will soon spring up.

All over Broadway.

A man can go out.

And get enough of it.

To make him pay his rent.

Or buy his wife a hat.

Or something else.

Equally foolish.

And all it costs.

Is two cents.

The price of a stamp.

Before the war.

I'm going to take.

Half of my day's pay.

And buy a double dose.

And then go down.

And take a running jump.

One of those little.

Trick cigar lighters.

And kick him in the wishbone.

I've been laying for him.

For six months.

But I never could.

Get up enough courage.

THIS MAN COULD NOT RESIST TEMPTATION OF LUSCIOUS PIE

Mince, Pumpkin or Berry, They Were All Strong Favorites

With This Devotee Of The Great American Dessert. But,

When He Ate Pie Things Immediately Began To Happen.

There are few men who will not admit an irresistible weakness for pie. It begins in childhood, when the stomach and digestion are in perfect working order and, in some cases, this fondness for pie grows stronger in later years, when the digestive apparatus has grown weaker and trouble begins. S. W. Greenway, a clerk at the Gierach Hotel, Raleigh, has conquered all the difficulties of pie eating and tells how he accomplished it.

"I will frankly admit that I am not happy when you deprive me of pie, but for two years we have been strangers. My stomach got into such a condition that merely looking at a piece of pie would sicken me and cause my stomach to turn flip-flops. That was not only true of pie, but nearly everything else in the food line had about the same effect and my condition became so bad that I almost wished that I was dead. That is the shape I was in when a friend called my attention to Peplac and urged me to try it, and I am doubly thankful that I did because it has not only relieved me of all the pain that I formerly suffered, but it has also enabled me to again indulge in my favorite pastime—eating pie. I can eat breakfast now; have no more pains and that nervous feeling has entirely left me. Peplac certainly did the work for me and I sincerely wish that everyone who is similarly troubled would take it and gain relief as I did."

In addition to the general sessions the program provides for numerous side conferences for the discussion of the main theme in its relation to separate businesses and industries.
