

FORMER WILSON CO. PASTOR BEATS WIFE

Whipping Said to Have Been Administered Because Mrs. Winstead Had Been Unable to Secure Endorsements for Some of her Husband's Financial Obligations in the Town.

Swainsboro, July 27.—Though willing to appear in person before congregations of each of the four churches that comprise the Swainsboro circuit and explain to them how it came to pass that he whipped his wife, Rev. W. H. Winstead, who has hidden the circuit for the past 18 months was relieved not only of the necessity of explaining to his several flocks and begging their forgiveness, but of the pastorate of them as well when the Presiding Elder at the altar intervened late Saturday, July 27.

The town has rocked with sensation since last Thursday afternoon when Mrs. Winstead sought refuge and comfort in the house of a neighbor after her husband had whipped her. Later she telephoned her grievance to the Presiding Elder, who came down the next day and advised the minister to quit.

No formal explanation of the cause of the difference between the preacher and his wife has been made to the church here or to any of the churches on the circuit. There was no service in any of them Sunday. But according to the reports of neighbors, and generally credited in the town, the whipping was administered because the wife had neglected or had been unable to secure endorsements for some of her husband's financial obligations in the town.

Involved financially, the preacher had exhausted his own resources in securing guarantees for a note that had been passed around among the members of his flock. He told his wife, according to a near neighbor, to go out and get the note renewed. He came home in the middle of the afternoon and upon the discovery that she had not done anything about the note, he administered punishment. Her screams were heard throughout the neighborhood.

It is reported here that Mr. and Mrs. Winstead have returned to their former home in Wilson county.

Paris, Aug. 1.—(AP)—Pushing slowly against a strong south wind down the valley of the Rhone, the transatlantic dirigible Graf Zeppelin this afternoon was well down towards the Mediterranean after having successfully passed the scenes of her landing struggle against contrary winds in her unsuccessful tryout in May.

The life dirigible carrying 12 Americans among her 18 passengers, steadily but cautiously negotiated the difficult mountainous regions between Basel, Switzerland, and Lyons, France, this morning, and was reported at Montelimar in Southern France, 59 miles from the mouth of the Rhone at 12:10 P.
