Take Chances only when your Industry Will Help Your.

Gambling gives one wrong business ideas. Unconsciously, the thrower of dice comes to regard all business transactions as matters of chance, and the poker enthusiast becomes the business sneak.

A certain gentleman of sporting proclivities once came home with five hundred dollars, as the result of a gambling bout. His wife entreated him to quit while he was winner and deposit the money in the bank, but he would have none of her advice. He returned to the game and came back next morning with a thousand more, fifteen hundred in all. Again his wife pleaded with him, in vain, for he returned on the third night with a total of four thousand. But on the fourth night, as luck would have it, he lost it all, including his pocket-knife, neck-tie and gold watch. The misfortune made him ill. He took to his bed and his broken hearted wife summoned a physician to whom she explained the whole situation.

"Madam," said the doctor, "I am sorry. I can do nothing for you. I am a veterinary surgeon."

"That is exactly why I sent for you," replied she, "My husband is a donkey."

The man who imagines that he can succeed financially by using the gambler's methods, reminds me of one of the boatmen condemned by John Bunyan, because he looked one way and rowed the other. He's not pulling himself in the same direction that he wants to go.

Not only does the gambling habit give a young man false ideas as to the element of chance in business, but it makes him lazy. A man who would quit his job before he would consent to stay until nine o'clock at night to help his employer, thinks nothing of sitting up at a card table until three in the morning, or indeed, all night, in the vain attempt to secure money that he ought to work for, like an honest man, in the day time. A boy who would not work as extra hour for fifty cents, will spend an entire evening trying to beat a gambling machine out of twenty or thirty cents, and come out loser in the end. He fools away his time until he is dismissed by his employer, and becomes eventually a chronic and constitutional loafer, industrious only when an opportunity presents itself to "take a chance" on something, stirred from his lethargy only by the news of a raffle or the possibility of a bet. He becomes so thoroughly satiated with these lazy ideas that they utterly control him, like the man who ate so many oysters that he rose and fell with the tide.

10 VITAL REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD SUPPORT KITCHIN?

(Compiled, Copyrighted, Distributed by A. J. Dunning, Jr.)

1. Senator Simmons has long been a great and useful man, but he is no longer so because I want his job.
2. Senator Simmons voted with the Republicans to adjourn and eat dinner, therefore he is a Republican because I want his job.
3. Senator Simmons has always been a good Democrat until this year. He is not a good one now because I want his job.
4. When Senator Simmons voted for Lorimer he was wrong and when he voted against Lorimer he was wrong because I want his job.
5. Sometimes Senator Simmons gets nothing for his state and sometimes he loots the U. S. Treasury for his state. He is wrong either way because I want his job.
6. When Locke Craig ran against me for Governor he was tainted with Republicanism because I wanted his job. Locke's Democracy is acceptable now because I want Simmons' job. I shall re-adjust my position regarding Simmons after the election, if I get the job.
7. If the state convention had listened to me it would have been the greatest convention in the history of the State, but brother Claude and I couldn't keep it from endorsing Senator Simmons, therefore I read the whole business out of the party pending election results.
8. When Senator Simmons voted with the Republicans it made him a Republican, but this does not apply to Brother Claude or the other Representatives or Senators.
9. I don't mean any special harm in talking about Simmons, but what else have I got to talk about? After a little while the Senator will be as good a Democat as I am, but in the meantime I want the job.
10. I shall shortly issue a signed statement charging Senator Simmons with wearing a number 6 shoe instead of a number 7 and I can prove it logically. This statement should have extreme weight in deciding your vote on this momentous question.

Our Greatest Modern Leader

On entering the National Democratic convention hall in Baltimore, I feared that I would not have the opportunity of hearing much from the "Peerless Leader" from Nebraska. The one above all from whom I was most anxious to hear.

He had been crushed by the predatory interests so many times, that I couldn't comprehend his ability to withstand their contemplated onslaught in the greatest and most powerful of all National Conventions. But before 48 hours had passed, I was the gladdest man in the armory of 25000, I saw him immediately upon two occasions, confidently and gracefully bring order out of chaos, after all the strenuous efforts by the other leaders had failed.

He seemed to be the only man in the convention who could command the respect of the majority of the whole people. These all important incidents for the procedure of the work proved to my mind that William Jennings Bryan was the livest dead man in America.

He was head and shoulders above any man in the convention and the most conspicuous personage in Baltimore. I have never witnessed such forensic oratory and debate as was presented by him to that great throng. Everything simply melted in the wake of his logic and reasoning. His burning words could be heard in every nook and corner of the great armory, and his remorseless crucifixions of those who were trying to saddle upon Democracy the stigma of the "predatory interests" was at once the shibboleth of the convention war.

I shall never forget the scene which was created when asked to be allowed to explain his vote for Wilson. He was calm and collected. When he had finished a delegate shouted: "Will you support the nominee of this convention?" Then came this reply, which was withering in the effect: "There is a difference between the lawyer who defends the criminal after the crime has been committed and the lawyer who convives with the criminal in the commission of the crime." Instantly the vast assemblage caught his reasoning and a cheering was started which lasted thirty minutes. The affect of his vote was realized later when the country folks were heard from by thousands of telegrams urging their delegates to follow Bryan and vote for Woodrow Wilson. Then came the inevitable. The Wilson votes were there. It was like prising an ice berg from its moorings when it started its course was easy, it gathered as it moved.

Bryan was the hero of the convention. He was the medium through which the nomination of a candidate of progressive policies was reached. His progressive ideas too, are written in the National Platform and he himself is a bigger man than ever before. He is to the American nation what Bismarck was to Germany, what Garibaldi was to Italy, and he stands before the people in the worth of his usefulness as a "Great Commoner" the invincible champion of government.

Aulander School Sep. 4th

The fall session of the Aulander Graded school will open on Wednesday Sept. 4th. The faculty for the ensuing year has been chosen with care, and this should prove one of the best years in the history of the school. Prof. J. B. Thorn, jr. A. B. Wake Forest College, is the Principal. Prof. Thorn comes to us highly recommended and is a most successful leader in educational work.

He was Principal of the Bethel Hill High School for three years. Miss Minnie E. Cox, Assistant Principal, a graduate of Meredith College, will be with us again this year. Miss Mabel Lawrence has also accepted one of the important grades for this year and will be with us again. Mrs. W. M. Peele who taught the primary grades last session will again have charge of these departments.

Miss Ethel Burden who studied at Chowan College last session will be among the faculty of the graded school here during this session. The music department will be under the direction of Miss Flossie Pickett, of Liberty, N. C. who studied at the Southern Presbyterian and State Normal College. She is well recommended and will instruct in both vocal and instrumental music.

The Trustees are to be congratulated on securing a faculty of high reputation and of great intellectual attainments and much is hoped and expected of this school this session. The fact that vocal music will be taught is another especially good feature of this work, as we have needed and desired this addition for some years.

On the whole it is doubtful that Aulander ever started a session under such favorable conditions and our people are a unit in trying to make the 1912-13 the greatest in our history. It is not only advisable, but essential to the welfare of the students that they enroll on the first day of the session and not wait until the school has been in progress for several days or weeks.

There is a lot of work to be done in classifying the grades and otherwise laying the foundation for the work, and both the faculty and Trustees will greatly assist in their duties if students enroll on the first day. Parents of school children and all others who are interested in the work are given special invitation to be present on the opening day when several addresses will be made.

It is to be hoped that the house will be full. A good send-off helps everybody concerned and all should make an effort to be present.

IN ADVOCACY OF SEN. SIMMONS' RE-ELECTION.

(Mr. Josiah W. Bailey's speech on Senator Simmons whole record)

North Carolina Democrats had a right to hope that the campaign for the Senatorship would be conducted on a high plane. That right was based on the fact that each of the candidates occupies a high office in the State and a high place in the party.

But, we regret to say, the Governor of this State has from the beginning disappointed that hope. He began his campaign with bitter attacks upon Senator Simmons. He has sought to maintain it by essaying the folly of trying to convince sensible people that Senator Simmons is "Republicanizing the State." And, what is more regrettable, he has pursued, and is pursuing, methods that are manifestly unfair, and that menace the welfare of the Democratic Party. He must realize that his ardent supporters are disappointed in him.

What methods we refer to will appear upon a casual review of his speeches and his literature.

For example, when the State Convention endorsed Mr. Simmons' record the Governor did not come out like a true Democrat and acquiesce in the decree of his Party, but, instead, in his Durham speech, he denounced the convention, and attempted to make light of its action. Evidently he thinks himself greater than his party.

Again, when the National Democratic Convention failed to declare for free lumber, free raw material, and reciprocity with Canada, Governor Kitchen let go his opportunity to set himself right with his party, and attempted, by sophistry to create the impression, in the face of the practical indorsement of Senator Simmons' course, that the platform was against the Senator. This was so obviously a peace of spacial pleading and of perversion that the Governor's best friends must recognize that he has proved himself neither candid nor frank. The party's platform is not a proper subject of jugglery. A bigger man would not have attempted to create an impression so contrary to the spirit and letter of his party's National platform.

Our platform was never meant to be put to such uses, and to undertake to do so cannot but lessen the respect in which the Party's declarations are held.

But by far the worst behavior of all the Governor's unhappy course is embodied in his circular entitled-- "READ THE RECORD."

It that circular he seeks to make capital of the fact that Senator Simmons, sitting as a juror, voted against declaring Senator Lorimer's seat vacant on the ground of corruption. It is new doctrine in this country that political capital can be made of a juror's verdict.

It is true that upon the discovery of new evidence the Lorimer case was reopened, and upon the presentation of that new evidence Simmons voted to declare Lorimer's seat vacant. But this does not justify Governor Kitchen's course in seeking to make political capital of a juror's vote. Nor is the Governor any the more satisfied than he was before.

Neither vote suits him. He seems bent on his course--joined to his idols.

In that circular he speaks of the vote for the South American Ocean mail service as a subsidy. He knows that every Democrat in the United States Senate voted just as did Mr. Simmons, and that not one of them is more favorable to subsidies than is the Governor-himself.

And yet he singles out Senator Simmons as voting for a subsidy! Mr. Simmons has voted just as every other Democratic Senator has voted on every bill about the merchant marine (Continued On Another Page)

The News From Lewiston

Misses Evie Leigh and Emly Mizelle delightfully entertained about fifty guests last evening complimentary to their house party that is being entertained at their home in Woodville.

The immense lawn was made very attractive with numerous lanterns and various arranged nooks.

Miss Lola Mizelle and Mr. Rawls served punch in the reception hall.

Mrs. R. M. Nowell of Selma N. C. introduced to the receiving line composed of Misses Evie Leigh and Emly Mizelle Kate Nelson Fenner, Florence Fenner of Halifax, Miss Beasley of Colerain, Miss Freeman of Windsor, Messrs W. Spruill of Quitsna and Clyde Freeman of Windsor.

Misses Mary Wood and Evie Leigh Mizelle delighted the guests with their instrumental and vocal solos. As the guests passed into the library delicious cream and cake.

This ended one of the most enjoyable events of the house party.

On Friday evening Messrs Burgen Urquhart, A. Urquhart, J. Thompson and W. M. Tompson gave a delightful automobile drive to Windsor complimentary to the young ladies of Misses Mizelle's House Party.

On Saturday an informal picnic was given on the lawn.

In Advocacy of Gov. Kitchen for Senate

Mr. Editor:-- So many peposterous claims as to Senator Simmons' leadership in the U. S. Senate have recently been circulated over the country by his partisans that I have thought it well to look him over.

From the pages of the Congressional Record, and form communications with his colleagues in Congress, I have gathered the following facts, which I beg to submit to your readers.

Our friend J. W. Bailey stated in his speeches that Simmons was the Democratic leader of the Senate, and pointed to that as proof of Simmons' worth, etc.. The trouble is that the statement is not true. Thomas S. Martin of Virginia is the true and only authorized leader of the Democrats in the Senate, made so some two years by the democratic caucus. Simmons name, in connection with the leadership, has never been mentioned in any democratic caucus. Bailey's speeches state that a democratic caucus of the senate unanimously resolved to place Simmons as the fittest man, in charge of the tariff bills sent over by the House.

There is not a word of truth in this. Simmons name in a senatorial democratic caucus has never been mentioned in connection with his leadership in the tariff fight; he has had control of the tariff bills in the Senate by reason of the custom prevailing for years in the Senate. It is the custom and rule that the ranking member of the minority of the finance committee (if he favors the measure) takes charge by virtue of his ranks, of all tariff bills and measures for the minority.

When the house sent the tariff bill to the senate Senator Bailey, the ranking man on the minority side in the committee, declined to act, pleaded sickness, Simmons on account of this, (Continued On Another Page)
