

INDIAN DANCES OCTOBER 4 TO 7

Cherokees to Hold Annual Fair and Games With Ancient Ritual

The peaceful mountain slopes of Western North Carolina will resound to the warwhoop of the Cherokee Indians when the Eastern Band of Cherokees stage their annual fair at Cherokee October 4 to 7. Indian dancers stepping to cadence of drums and board rattles, will revive the ancient rites of the war and harvest dances of their race, for the entertainment of thousands of white spectators.

Indians of the Big Cove section of the 60,000-acre reservation have annually presented the Green Corn dances, celebrating the harvest. This year dances from Birdtown, and Soco will compete with the Big Cove Indians in a dance contest which will mark the revival of the Green Corn, the Butterfly, the Eagle and other ancient terpsichorean rites of the Eastern Cherokees. The dances this year are expected to attract even more attention than the barbaric Indian Ball Games.

In Ancient Costume
The dancing groups, competing for prizes, will dress in the ancient costumes of the tribe. The dances will be held twice daily at 10:30 A. M. and at 7:30 P. M. with the exception of September 7 when the night dance program will not be held. Both the Indian men and women will enter into the dances each group led by its particular medicine man.

The fact that N. C. 107, the main highway through the Great Smoky Mountains National Park, now open for traffic, leads directly through the heart of the Eastern Cherokee lands, is expected to have an influence in increasing the crowds at the fair, this year. The whites in attendances at the events will include not only visitors sojourning in Western North Carolina, but also visitors touring through the National Park during the early days of October.

The Indian Ball Game, a primitive form of lacrosse, the bow and arrow and blowing contests, the exhibits of Indian arts and crafts and products of the Indian farms are included among the interesting events and displays, which will absorb the attention of those attending the fair. Cherokee, N. C., the location for the Indian school and site of the annual fair, is easily reached over paved and improved highways from Asheville, Waynesville, Hendersonville, Brevard, Highlands, Franklin, Murphy, Bryson City and other points in Western North Carolina, and from the middle west over the trans-park highway.

Divorces Popular Nine Called Quits in '31, And Only 2 in '30

Nine Macon county couples couldn't stand it any longer and quit in 1931, according to the U. S. Department of Commerce, which oddly enough keeps an eye on things like that, as against two couples who told it to the judge in 1930.

And while there were twenty-three marriages in this county in 1930, there were two less in 1931, according to the same statistical source.

Why this sudden increase in divorces and slight decrease in marriages, the Department of Commerce doesn't try to explain, but the odds are a thousand to one that Walter Winchell would know.

More bachelors are at large all over the state, too. In 1930, 14,573 males were trapped as against 13,127 in 1931. Maybe the gals have started throwing the little ones away. Statistics for 1932 will probably be vastly different, for this is a Leap Year, open season, catch-as-catch can, no holds barred.

Last year, two more couples stayed married than in 1930. There were 1,535 divorces in '31 and 1,537 in '30.

The estimated population of North Carolina on July 1, 1931, was 3,212,000, and on July 1, 1930, 3,185,000. In high school language, that means the number of marriages per 1,000 in '31 was 4.1, as against 4.6 in '30.

Autumn Trembles on the Leaf And Children Say It in Verse

Spring isn't the only season for poets, not at Liberty School, anyway. Plumage of the yellow gold-enrod and withered cheek of winter apple inspire youthful verse writers just as much as peach blossoms and vernal moons. This, for instance, is Verna Shepard's impression of September:

The weather is pretty and how the sun does shine,
It makes us feel so healthy and fine.

September has come at last,
And all the flowers are fading fast
But we know they will bloom again,
When the happy springtime comes,
The golden-rod is yellow,
And all the apples are getting mellow,
Soon the nuts will begin to fall,
Then there is fun for us all.

AUTUMN

By Birdie Leatherman
Autumn is here and winter is near,
Apples begin to fall and boys play ball.

The yellow-jackets swarm and we hear the hunter's horn,
The pumpkins are yellow and fruits are mellow,
And happily we run to school alone
As the autumn birds chant their songs.

The Walkal Literary Society gave the following program on Friday, Sept. 15:
I. Conking's poem "A Sunset Moment," by Birdie Leatherman.
II. De le More's poem "Silver" by Dorman Gibson. De le More's poem "Full Moon," by Lucile Mason.

III. Stevenson's poems: "The Land of Story Books," by Dorsey Elmore. "The Land of Nod," by G. H. Gibson.
IV. Eugene Field's poems: "The Night Wind," by Paul Hurst. "The Rock-a-Bye Lady," by Pearl Hurst. "The Sugar Plum Tree," by Palmer Shepard.

N. C. Forest Funds State to Get Four Thousand and for Local Work

North Carolina's share of the $568,256.91 to be distributed to thirty-three states and territories containing national forests as their share of the national forest receipts for the fiscal year of 1932, will be $3,101.91 on the twenty-five per cent fund paid in lieu of taxes and $1,240.76 on the ten per cent fund for trails and roads.

The funds paid to states will be turned over to the counties containing the National Forests, for local county road and school use. In addition to the 25 per cent fund turned over to the states, 10 per cent of the National Forest receipts is set aside each year to be expended by the Forest Service for National Forest roads and trails within the counties containing National Forests. This fund amounts this year to $227,302.60 and it is supplementary to the regular annual and emergency appropriations made by Congress for forest road and trail construction.
