BY REV. NORVIN C. DUNCAN
REVIVALISTS have often played on the emotions of their congregations with the song, "Tell Mother I'll Be There." There have been several million women in America who wished fervently that their husbands and children had learned to sing it with healthier sentiment and more practical application sooner. I have heard it sung frequently at funerals amidst loud wailings and lamentations. The preachers solemnly declared it the wisdom of Divine Providence, but the doctor would have said, with more semblance of truth, that bearing and caring for so many children brought her to an early grave. In the industrial centers, and on the farms women share in the general work as well as for caring for children. Husbands and children hardly ever think of relieving them of their burdens. No class of people in America stands more in need of a New Deal than the women on farms and in industrial communities.

Religious leadership ought to furnish something for this life as well as hope for the life hereafter. We clerics frequently criticize the business and scientific world. It might help us to realize that the field of religion needs revision in the direction of sanity. I think that millions of American women would prefer that, instead of singing at their funerals, husbands and children would, at dish-washing time, cooking time, or milking time, grab a bucket or dish rag and sing out, "Tell Mother I'll Be There."

The 3rd annual reunion of the Cunningham-Campbell clan was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Cunningham on Franklin Route 1, on Sunday, August 20.

A short talk was made by the president, Gus Leach, and Lon Campbell was elected president for the coming year.

"Aunt Sallie" Cunningham, in whose honor this reunion was held, is over 90 years old, but despite her age she was able to be out among the crowd and was one of the gayest present.

In the shade of the big oak tree which stands on the Cunningham lawn, the long table was placed and a variety of delicious food was thoroughly enjoyed by approximately 100 relatives and friends.

The out-of-the-county relatives present were Mr. and Mrs. C. Cunningham and children, of Winston-Salem, Miss Sue Cunningham, of Winston-Salem, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Campbell, of Charlotte, and Miss Pauline Campbell, of Asheville.

LUKE RILEY SAYS THE RATS DIE BEFORE REACHING THE RIVER

Since moving near the river several years ago we've always used BEST-YET. We watched the vicious Water Rats nibbling at BEST-YET, outside the house. About 15 minutes later they darted off for the river to cool their burning stomachs, but died before reaching it. Kills rats and mice only. Will not hurt cats, dogs or chickens, and there is no smell from the dead rat. BEST-YET comes in two sizes, 4 oz. size 50c; 6 oz. size 75c. Sold and guaranteed by PERRY'S DRUG STORE.
