COMMUNITY SCHOOLS FOR ADULTS ORGANIZED

Mrs. Annie Westbrook, who recently completed a short course for unemployed teachers at Western Carolina Teachers college, Cullowhee, has enrolled 23 persons in a home-making class which she has organized.

Classes are held Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of each week at Mrs. Westbrook's home on Shortoff road and on Friday at the Methodist parsonage at Highlands.

All phases of home-making are included in the course. Mrs. Westbrook said, with special emphasis on the practical side. Cooking lessons have been started and will continue for four weeks. These lessons stress the proper preparation of foods, dietetics, budgeting and serving, with special attention given to the need of proper food for children.

The classes also will present the social side of life. It is planned to hold a community party at least once a month.

The classes are free.

Another community class for adults has been organized by Miss Susan Rice with 16 students enrolled. The school is progressing nicely and the students are enthusiastic over their work.

HONOR ROLL ANNOUNCED

The honor-roll of the Highlands school for January has been announced as follows:

PAST RECORDS BROKEN IN CANNING FOOD

North Carolina farm women filled 11,570,950 quarts of surplus food during 1933, according to records gathered from home demonstration club women by regular and emergency home agents.

In a report made to Mrs. Jane S. McKimmon last week, Mrs. Cornelia C. Morris, food conservation specialist at State college paid high tribute to the efforts of farm women in the state to grow and save adequate food supplies in 1933. Early last January, the home demonstration workers mapped out a plan to aid rural women regularly enrolled in home demonstration clubs and to extend this aid to women who had not received this instruction at club meetings.

"One of the main objects of our effort was to aid every relief family living on a farm, whether owner or tenant, to produce food, including gardens, poultry and food and feed crops of sufficient variety and quantity for home consumption and to conserve fruits and vegetables for winter use," Mrs. Morris said. "The results show that this objective was about met and in addition there is more foodstuffs available for home use this winter than in any previous year since the World War."

SOIL SURVEY IS COMPLETED

Ashe, and Congaree series. Extensive areas of soils are of such rough and rugged surface relief that they can not be profitably farmed. Some of these soils can be used for permanent pastures, but they are comparatively high in potash, and their physical characteristics are such that with proper fertilization they produce good crops. Approximately 77 per cent of the farms are operated by owners.

"Opportunities are afforded for fruit growing, especially apples and berries; for truck-crop growing; for the development of the cattle-raising industry; and for increased production of butterfat, pork, eggs, and poultry."

BREEDING HEIFERS

No arbitrary age can be set for breeding heifers as this is determined by the maturity and breed of each animal. Jersey and Guernsey heifers, if properly grown out, should be bred to freshen from 24 to 30 months of age. The Ayrshire and Holstein heifers should be bred so as to freshen from 27 to 32 months of age. Heifers that are fed liberal grain rations in addition to the roughage will mature more quickly than those receiving a limited grain ration and this should be considered when breeding.

RELIGION In The Here and Now

By Rev. Norvin C. Duncan

ON the night of the betrayal and arrest of our Blessed Lord, Peter drew a sword and cut off the right ear of a member of the arresting party. Jesus did not resist them. Instead, He put forth His hand and healed the wound. This was characteristic of Jesus, whose loving ministry was extended to all. He healed the wound of His adversary; He prayed for His murderers as He died.

There were many times in His ministry that He avoided trouble; times when He exercised common sense and moved away from His enemies. But when the hour arrived that He must face them He did so without fear. He faced the inevitables of life without flinching, without murmur, without anger; and not one blow did He strike at His foes. There was nothing but love in His heart, and His healing of the servant's ear was just a natural expression of His love.

In this incident we see the heart of God, and how He acts. Another thing we see is how humanity acts. Human beings cause each other much pain. Even those who profess and call themselves after the name of Christ hurt one another.

Peter was a member of the band of disciples. Jesus had to heal a wound, caused by one of His own children. And that is a parable of life. The Divine compassion must continually go forth to heal wounds caused by His own people. It is one of the amazing things that there is so much quarreling and strife among members of the Church. However much we try to gloss it over with pretended unity, the different bodies of Christians view each other with more suspicion and ill feeling than they are willing to admit, and it frequently happens that the saddest tragedies of domestic life are the result of a man and his wife belonging to different churches. One does not have to travel far to find heart-rending tragedies in this field.

Among members of the same flock there is more bickering and strife than in many secular organizations. One wonders sometimes how the Church succeeds as well as it does, considering the dissension and strife within it. That it does succeed so well is an evidence of the indwelling power of the Divine Spirit.

But it is true, sadly true, that many tears are made to flow by members of the same household. Some in the Church are making tears to flow; others must wipe them away. Divine compassion must flow through the members of the body, that the hurt and wounded members may be healed. Weak, impulsive Peter thought he was doing His Master a service; yet he was but adding another load upon His already bleeding heart. And how often do we, His professed followers, think that we are doing His service when we insist upon having our way in doing Church work. It is so easy to deceive ourselves, and insist upon having our way about things, and declare that we are doing it in His Name. And, sadly, He must put forth His hand to heal the wounds which we have made.

It is next to blasphemous to conduct war in His name; to quarrel in His household, or to hurt and wound His own in any way. When are we going to learn that the heart of God is love, and that any act which is not born of love is not of Him?

SURE— You Can Do Without Advertising. BUT Why Want To?

OF COURSE your business, or any fundamentally sound business, can do without advertising. Your business can get along without a telephone, a typewriter or modern buildings and equipment. It can struggle along with inefficient employees, poor salesmen and only average sales. Many businesses do. But why should YOU want to?

Advertising increases volume, cuts sales cost, sells the more profitable numbers in your line—in short, advertising helps make two sales grow where only one grew before and makes all your selling easier. Advertising is responsible for that extra profit. Business leaders settled that long ago—they advertise because they know it pays. Why should you want to deny yourself the time-tested advantages of advertising—the force that changes the taste, thinking and buying of America's millions?

Maybe you have made up your mind to advertise your business, but have hesitated because you were not sure of the most profitable way to go about it. There is just one safe way to advertise merchandise or services to the 14,000 people of Macon County—that is through the medium of The Press-Maconian, which reaches every type of buyer in every section of the county. It is our mission to see that your advertising pays, that it brings you results.

Let us prove to you that advertising in this newspaper will bring added profits to your business.
