ABSENTEE BRIDE-ELECT HONORED AT SHOWER

Friends of Miss Betty Sloan, daughter of Mrs. W. W. Sloan, were invited to a recipe shower at her home, "Sunnyside Farm," Friday, April 22. Guests were asked to bring their favorite recipes to aid the bride-elect, Miss Sloan, in the culinary arts. These, from the 35 or more guests, completely filled an attractive little hand-painted recipe folder. Due to the absence of the honored bride-to-be and her fiancée, Mr. James McAllister, both being in New York, this couple was represented in proxy by Miss Amanda Slagle as Miss Sloan and Miss Rosalee Morrow as Mr. McAllister. The impersonators, in evening dress and tuxedo, completely surprised the mother of the bride when they entered with their arms full of packages. These, in great glee and excitement, they opened, disclosing to the interested group of friends, gifts to delight any bride.

Then followed a poem, "A Mother's Wish," charmingly read by Mrs. R. S. Jones, after which there was a contest, "The Recipe for Happiness" in which all the guests participated. The first letter of each line began with one letter of the bride-elect's name. Much merriment followed when the various advices were read aloud. Mrs. Robert Patton's, as prize winner, was as follows:

"Beat eggs vigorously, husbands gently but often.
Endure his ashes all over the floor,
Tell him he is handsome,
Tell him he is smart.
You may know better, but he will not."

At the conclusion of the afternoon's fun, dainty refreshments were served by Misses Amanda Slagle, Rosalee Morrow, Virginia McGuire and Sarah-Hicks Hines.

FOOLISH FANCIES

BY ROY L. GRIFFIN
Of N. C. Camp F-9
Civilian Conservation Corps

AN orchid to my beloved sister-in-law, for the very original idea printed below. Thanks, Mildred, write again, sometime.

All of you people who are not susceptible to the heebie-jeebies, please listen to the musings of a canteen clerk.

Sweethearts On Parade—I remember Mary and her beautiful eyes—but she had halitosis; then came Pearl with the Grecian profile—but she had pink toothbrush; and then comes Vivian, who was so pleasingly plump—but she had B. O.; and last of all comes the ideal girl, Louise, with her unquestionably good character—and I have a black eye.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The response to my "Answer Box" is simply devastating. Send in your questions. If my answer isn't up to your expectations, then blame it on the moon.

Q.—What food article will bring the weight down?
A.—banana peel.

Q.—What is a bachelor?
A.—A man who didn't have a car when he was young.

Q.—Who do you think would make the best husband for a Franklin girl?
A.—O. G. Goodnight—cantanswerthatone. He lives just around the corner.

Q.—What becomes of a baseball player when his eyesight begins to fail him?

A.—They make an umpire out of him.

Q.—Why do they call George Chandler "Chicken?"
A.—For the same reason that Rome wasn't built in a day.

Q.—What is it that comes in like a lion and goes out like a lamb?
A.—Father, when he brings home his salary.

Q.—Does John Fortner still have rheumatism?
A.—No. All of us have common ailments on days that we don't feel like working.

Q.—Do clever men make the best husbands?
A.—Clever men don't become husbands.

Q.—My doctor gave me a bill for five dollars for medicine and fifty dollars for visits. How would you settle the bill?
A.—I would send him the five dollars for the medicine and return the visits.

Well, enough nonsense for one day. Folks, you'd better send in that question. You know, this column won't be here much longer.

Away from the wit and humor (?) and nonsensical addities of this column, let us dwell for a moment on a bit of tender seriousness. Huh?

Sitting here in the quiet of evening, faces seem to pass before my eyes in an endless procession. Faces of boys I have known in one of the most wonderful years of my life. Most of them are gone, now. Not out of life, but practically the same thing. Possibly I'll never see them again; but as to forgetting. Never! Tell me, how could I, when our cigarettes, and stamps, and letters from home were shared alike with one another. No, nine-hundred and ninety-nine times, no.

And when the time comes, when, with my barracks bag filled with treasures hoarded for a year, I turn for a last glimpse of dear old Franklin, I'll quietly say, "Life is no bed of roses."

MUSINGS OF A CANTEEN CLERK

Things I can't do without: Joe Penner's Sunday night broadcast. Joe Hancock's friendship. Sugar in my coffee. Fred Arnold's cafe. Mae West pictures. M. A. O. Camel cigarettes. Letters from Mother. Stick candy at Christmas. Peas and rice on New Year's day. Flannel trousers. Grade "A" sweet milk. Blue neck-ties. Speaking of red jackets—I noticed no less than four, worn by feminine creatures, on the school bus this morning. Someone else likes red, too.

RELIGION

In The Here and Now
By Rev. Norvin C. Duncan

"BRAIN TRUST" IS TOPIC

The "brain trust" of the New Deal was defended and criticized before the American Society of Newspaper Editors in Washington on Saturday. Rexford G. Tugwell, assistant secretary of agriculture, who is regarded as a brain trust leader referred to the New Deal as a return to true democracy. Later on the program, Eugene Meyer, publisher of the Washington Post, and governor of the Federal Reserve board during the Hoover administration, said that the country's most immediate danger lies in the inexperience of the young intellectuals who are now apparently directing the policy of the administration.

ANGEL'S DRUG STORE

Franklin, N. C.

one did not much expect it of them.

Such an act does not fit in with the prevailing philosophy of a large number of Americans, especially in scientific and intellectual circles. It seems to be significant of the religious trend in America, or perhaps we should say a lack of religion.

There are many people who have some vague idea that there may be a God, but they cannot locate Him in their thinking, nor in the affairs of life. A large number have no more creed than a sort of scientific or intellectual agnosticism. They cannot see God in any intimate relationship with any of His creatures, and therefore they have discarded prayer as a superstition unworthy of an intelligent person.

With this has come the practical doctrine of human independence and self-sufficiency. Man can make an airplane, and man can take care of himself in it; what is the use of asking God to help? We have substituted for "I believe in God the Father Almighty," the creed, "I believe in man, sufficient to his own needs." Many no longer pray, because they feel that there is no need to pray. Having reached the stage where we think we can make all the things that we want, we are amply able to take care of ourselves. We have many of the outward forms of religion, but it does not vitally effect the affairs of life.

European nations have preserved many of the customs which associate God with the everyday affairs of human beings, and they do well to do so.

The scientific spirit which ruled out the supernatural removed God from His world in any sort of intimate relationship with it. To many there may be a God beyond the universe but they cannot see Him in it.

The other day the recently enthroned Emperor of Manchukuo, a young man of 28 years of age, prepared for the ceremonies and the responsibilities of his office by fasting and praying. We may look up to his religion as inferior to ours, and many will regard his acts as superstition, but his religion means something to him. The Western world has been afflicted with a superiority complex because of its scientific and mechanical progress; viewing the mysticism of the East as childish and superstitious. But with the collapse of our social structure we might well begin to ponder the spiritual values of the East.

The one hopeful incident in our national experience was the fact that President Roosevelt went to church on the morning of his inauguration for a service of consecration, and asked Divine guidance in his undertakings. That is a bright spot in our history and an example worthy of wide emulation.
