Bringing HOME the FACTS

by BARBARA DALY

France is a portion of Utopia I am reserving for my declining years. I hope some day to visit that land of bouillabaisse and crepe Suzettes. When I do I'll make straight for Mont Saint-Michel. For there lived Madame Poulard. She it was who flipped omelets to a King's taste. If she didn't exactly mother the hen that laid the egg, at least Madame Poulard made culinary history when she flipped her first omelet. For her fame as an omelet maker spread far and wide.

An omelet can be tough and dry like Irish moss. Or it can display all the virtues of a new-laid egg, tender within, yet firm and determined without, yielding the promise of good substantial fare. Here's my method. Yours may vary a jot or so but on one point we'll agree. The eggs must be fresh. Two to a person and then one more. Drop a lump of butter into an iron skillet that has been polished clean as a teacup. Whisk up the eggs, with salt and pepper, and let them cook slowly and tenderly in the skillet, over a middling flame. When the eggs have acquired a firm glaze on top, run the tip of a spatula around the curved edge. Flip one half the omelet over the other and gently lift to a hot platter. That's all there is to a Madame Poulard omelet.

If you must gild the lily, here are a few omelet variations: Before folding the omelet, sprinkle with minced chives, grated cheese, or tomato stewed with ground clove and onion. Children like it with shredded orange or pineapple. Served with bread croutons tossed in butter, it has a masculine ring to it.

I watched a portly friend spoon two tablespoons of brown sugar into her cup of coffee. "Someone told me brown sugar isn't as fattening as white. I always use brown," she explained. Don't fool yourself, lady, I said in effect. There's approximately only one teaspoonful less of brown sugar than white, in a one hundred calorie portion.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. believes that more women could find satisfaction in expressing that inner creative urge if they would take up needlepoint. Her own work is famous and has appeared on exhibition. One of her samplers tells the story of her husband's big game hunts. The best examples of Colonial needlework depicted events in the everyday lives of their workers. So Mrs. Roosevelt believes that every piece of needlework should commemorate something significant in life as it is lived to-day.

Handy tools to have around in an emergency. No tool chest is well-equipped without them. A tiny screw driver for the sewing machine; pair of pliers-decapitates bottles of the screw-top variety; a putty knife—for scraping anything from loose paint to chewing gum; upholstery tacks—good for recalcitrant carpets that insist on curling up; an ice-pick whose uses are too numerous to mention—grand for spearing and dipping candy.

A jug of ale or porter and a thick, juicy beefsteak was common fare along the New York water-front one hundred years ago. A sea captain, coming in hungry from a tussle with the elephants, could drop in at any porterhouse and order up a mess of beefsteak. It was then cut we know as "porterhouse" but called "roasting sirloin" at that time. Soon the vogue for short orders had a quick-cooking steak a la Porterhouse, spread, and butchers dubbed the choice top muscle, cut from the sirloin Porterhouse Steak.

You like other cuts of meat besides Porterhouse? So do we. Some of the less tender cuts which make excellent steaks and chuck, shoulder, flank, round or rump. Three rules apply to the cooking of them if you would have tender meat. Low heat, added moisture and lid clamped on tight. Only the pedigreed Porterhouse Clan—sirloin, tenderloin, club and ribs short-cut flourish uncovered, over live coals and without added moisture.

A little paint is the elixir of life to an aging ice-box refrigerator. A fresh coat of paint retards the penetration of heat by sealing the porous wood thus checking tiny beads of moisture which may form on the outside.

Overheard at a State Fair last Fall: "Town life for me is just like Chop Suey. Tasty if you feel strong."
