

FAIR . . . world's greatest

New York is going to have a world's fair in 1939. The date will commemorate the 150th anniversary of the beginning of our nation. On April 30, 1789, the first President of the United States, George Washington, took the oath of office on the balcony of Federal Hall, at the corner of Broad and Wall Streets, and for more than a year he lived as President in New York. The national capital was then removed to Philadelphia, where it remained until the new city of Washington was ready for President John Adams.

New York City is almost a perpetual World's Fair in itself. The first World's Fair in America was held in New York, in the Crystal Palace, in 1854. The promoters of the 1939 exposition promise something grander and more interesting than has even been held.

At any rate, it will give everybody an opportunity and an excuse to visit America's greatest city.

MEMORIES . . . growth

Years ago I met an old man who claimed to have seen President Washington. That may have been true, for certainly there were many men alive in my boyhood who were born before Washington died. But I have found that many old people "remember" things that never happened.

One old gentleman, Major George Haven Putnam, who died at 83 a few years ago, told me a story that I do believe. As a small boy he was walking with his father on the Bowling Green, at the lower end of Broadway. They met Washington Irving, the famous author, who was born in 1783. Irving patted the little boy on the head, and said to him:

"Now you are only two pats on the head from George Washington." He had been walking with his own father, Irving said, at almost the same spot, when they met President Washington, who patted his little namesake on the head.

When I hear such anecdotes and realize that only the span of two human lives lies between today and the beginning of our nation, I am always freshly amazed that we have grown in so short a time to the wealthiest, most vigorous and almost the largest nation in the world. And I wonder how much farther we are going.

FARADAY . . . and tax

The other day a scientist in London, seated at the desk used by Michael Faraday, struck a match and lighted a candle. That started an electrical impulse which sped across the Atlantic and lighted a lamp to signalize the opening of the new Museum of Science and Industry in New York.

Faraday, the blacksmith's son who invented the electric dynamo, could not have foreseen a miracle like that, perhaps, though he was a good prophet. When Mr. Gladstone, Queen Victoria's Prime Minister, asked him what good his dynamo was, Faraday replied: "Some day you can tax it."

Our whole great structure of public utilities is founded mainly on Faraday's invention. And governments have certainly discovered that it is taxable!

ICE . . . harvest

The biggest ice crop in many years is being harvested on the upper Hudson River and the lakes of northern New York, and New England. Two-foot ice is reported from Lake Champlain, and still freezing.

Electric refrigeration in homes, and artificial ice plants everywhere, have pretty nearly ruined what used to be a prosperous and profitable industry. The annual ice crop used to bring more cash into the towns along the northern rivers than anything else. While there is still a market for good natural ice, it is small and localized.

Yet I haven't heard of the "ice farmers" asking the Government for relief!

FISHING . . . winter

Winter fishing through the ice is just as popular and profitable as ever. I had a letter from a niece

First Air Lines "Czar"

CHICAGO . . . Col. Edgar S. Gorrell (above), former army aviator, is the new and the first "Czar" of commercial aviation. He was elected by the recently organized Air Transport Ass'n. His job is to coordinate the commercial lines.

in Vermont the other day, who wrote that her husband and five other men had built their fishing shack about three miles out on Lake Champlain and were making big catches of pike and pickerel.

I haven't been around the winter fishing grounds for years, but I have vivid memories of one Spring when the ice broke up unexpectedly on Lake Erie and several fishermen were carried down the Niagara River on floes, with on-lookers on shore unable to do anything to save them.

I suppose most young folks of today would balk at taking such risks to earn a living. But forty or fifty years ago nobody expected somebody else to feed him if he didn't work at whatever there was to do.
