

Slightly Confused

Customer (in music store)—I would like very much to get a copy of "The Stolen Rope."
 Proprietor—I am very sorry, madam. I am afraid I don't know of such a song. Is it something very new?
 Customer—Oh, no, they tell me it is quite old. Why it goes something like this—"Tum-tum-tumpety-tum."
 Proprietor—My dear madam, you mean "The Lost Chord."
 Customer—Oh, that's it. I got the name slightly mixed.

KEEP BABY AWAKE

Houston, Texas.—Instead of the usual fight to get their baby to sleep, Mr. and Mrs. Claude McDaniel had the unusual experience recently of having to take extraordinary means to keep their 22-months old baby girl, Ruby Naomi, from going to sleep for hours. The child had taken by mistake a salve which contained a powerful sleep-producing drug and doctors advised against allowing the child to go to sleep for hours thereafter.

Unconstitutional

Because he had been naughty Willie's mother had decreed that he should not go to the movies to see the usual Saturday afternoon western thriller. Willie however, had been studying current events at school and did not intend to give up without a struggle.
 "You have no constitutional right to do this, mother," he said.
 "Why not?" asked his parent.
 "Because you are exercising rule without consent of the governed."

Trying To Revive Stone Mountain Project

STAMFORD, CONN.—Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, says he is planning to devote much of his attention to the revival of the Stone Mountain memorial project near Atlanta.
 "Three years ago Georgia, by an act of the legislature, took over the responsibility of completing the Stone Mountain Confederate memorial for the commission," he said.
 "I expect this commission to request that I return and complete the work. My return has been delayed because of the need of my presence in completing the federal memorial at Mount Rushmore, South Dakota.
 "The work on Mount Rushmore is now so far advanced that I am planning to give much of my personal attention to the revival of the Stone Mountain project."

CATCHES FISH WITH HANDS

Beach Haven, N. J.—George Rambo saw a 19-pound tuna fish swimming close to shore. He ran out into the water up to his knees, grabbed the fish by its tail and tossed it on the beach. Fishermen say it is the first time a tuna was caught within five miles of the shore here.

 ialize. Both candidates are steering pretty well clear of this controversial issue.

Reiterates Change

Speaking at Scotland Neck Tuesday night, McDonald reiterated his charge that Hoey has been a power company lobbyist.
 "Mr. Hoey and Hubert E. Olive (Hoey's campaign manager), have denied that Hoey was a lobbyist," McDonald said. "They no doubt have thought that there was no record of his lobby activities and that they could therefore deceive the people. But the facts are recorded and cannot be hidden by the Gardner-Ehringhaus-Hoey ring politicians."
 McDonald cited what he said was the "official report of the federal trade commission on the Duke Power company, filed April 17, 1935," to substantiate his charge.

This report, he said, reads as follows: "Payment to Clyde R. Hoey, $3,412.50. This item was charged to general miscellaneous expense. Mr. Hoey is a practicing attorney in Shelby, N. C., and was employed to appear in behalf of the company before legislative connection with production tax bills pending before the legislature."

 "If Clyde R. Hoey nor, his influence could power company a for this large lobby ald said, and added are too high in North should be reduced. Hainly favor his power company, such large fees."
 Hoey, speaking accused his opponent ing and said, "I ret McDonald into the the only attack against McDonald his political record strate the fallacy of promises."
