Applications already are being taken at recruiting stations in the eight southeastern states which make up the fourth corps area, but vacancies for more than 1,800 soldiers are still available.

Recruits not only are offered the opportunity of service in the army of the United States, but also have the chance to extend their education, take vocational training in the army schools and prepare themselves for careers, either continuing in the army or in civilian life after their enlistments expire.

There are 17 recruiting stations in the eight states, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana, which are in the fourth corps area. In addition, for the next 30 days, there will be 10 roving parties of recruiters canvassing sections of these states which are not near a recruiting station.

Applicants for service must be between the ages of 18 and 35 and physically fit. They will be enlisted as privates with a monthly pay of $21—but most of that is velvet, as the army provides food, clothing, shelter and medical care.
