U. D. C. AWARDS ESSAY PRIZES

Jean Moore Winner In Contest At Meeting Held Monday

A very interesting meeting of the United Daughters of Confederacy was held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. R. Ray.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Carl S. Slagle, president, with a program on Jefferson Davis, whose birthday anniversary was June 3.

Mrs. Ray gave a short sketch on his life. Mrs. Zeb W. Conley read an article on "The First White House," while Miss Nora Leach told about the permit being drafted to grant the "Daughters of Confederacy" to erect a suitable marker as a memorial to Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederate States of America, at the terminus of the Jefferson Davis national highway.

The chapter gave a cash prize for the best essay written on a hero or heroine in the war between the states. This was won by Miss Jean Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Moore, of Franklin. The essay was a sketch of the life of her great-grandmother, Avaline Lynch Barnard.

The heroine in this story has one daughter, Mrs. A. W. Horne, and three sons in Macon county, J. L. Barnard, of Franklin; W. D. and Lack Barnard, of Iotla, and one son, Tom Barnard, at Beech, in Buncombe county.

The essay is as follows:

MY FAVORITE HEROINE IN THE WAR BETWEEN THE STATES

Praises of great military heroes of the war between the states have been sung over and over again, but very seldom do we hear of the noble women and men who stayed behind to carry on the poor home life of the South. Very few people have ever heard of Avaline Lynch Barnard; fewer remember her, for she was a young woman when the war began.

Avaline Lynch was born in Rutherford county in 1832. Her father was well educated, her grandfather Kerr was a Presbyterian minister, and she herself had a fairly good education. She met and married William Barnard when she was about 20 years of age. They moved to Buncombe county, where they lived for many years.

In the backwoods settlement on Big Ivy creek, the need of medical aid was urgent, so this young woman, fresh from a home of comparative comfort, read and studied until she had a fairly good knowledge of the profession. In later years she was affectionately called "Doctor Barnard." With a natural

BEE EXPERT TO VISIT COUNTY

C. L. Sams, Specialist Of Raleigh, Will Be Here June 22

Beekeeping is an industry which is worthy of increased development, since it meets the growing demand for a palatable food. Besides its use for the table, honey is much used in cooking to replace all or part of the sugar called for by a recipe.

Many beekeepers in Macon county have their bees in gums and box-hives, and it can not be too strongly recommended that these be transferred as rapidly as possible to modern movable-frame hives. The complaint is often heard, that modern hives are too expensive but the advantage of being able to handle the bees far outweighs the cost of equipment. However, transferring bees to modern hives will not be profitable unless the bees are then properly cared for.

The tendency to swarm can be reduced by the introduction of superior stock, by the use of well arranged hives and good comb, and by management which prevents a congestion of bees in the brood nest. Swarming, therefore, can be prevented to a large extent by proper equipment and management.

European foulbrood is a disease of the brood of bees which has caused great losses to beekeepers. This is a disease of weak colonies. The disease is prevalent in spring and early summer. European foulbrood is an infectious disease. However strong colonies under suitable conditions and headed by vigorous queens of resistant stock, European foulbrood will usually make little, if any headway.

Mr. C. L. Sams, bee specialist, from Raleigh, will be in the county Tuesday, June 22. We will be on the farm of H. E. Keener in the Gold Mine section at 8:30 o'clock. On the farm of E. V. Ammons, Holly Springs section, at 10:30 o'clock. At the home of Ben Harrison in Franklin at 1 o'clock. On the farm of M. S. Burnett in the Sealy section at 3:30 o'clock.

Farmers desiring to secure any information regarding beekeeping should be at one of these places mentioned and at the time stated.

Mr. Sams is an authority on bees and can give any one desiring it, some valuable information.

S. W. Mendenhall,
County Agent.

Three Hurt

Wreck Sunday Injures Phillips Family

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Phillips and their five-year-old son were painfully injured Sunday morning when their car overturned on the Wayah road about nine miles from Franklin, near the home of Miss Annie Slagle.

Mr. Phillips and his family were returning from a trip to Wayah Bald, and the accident is said to have been caused by his driving too near the soft shoulder of the road. The car left the highway and turned over twice, landing in Wayah creek.

The members of the family were all taken to Angel hospital where it was found that Mr. Phillips had suffered a fractured knee cap, Mrs. Phillips had three broken ribs and a five-year-old son, George, who was the most seriously injured, was suffering from brain concussion. Three other children were uninjured.

A two-months-old daughter was washed from the car when it overturned and was carried for about 50 feet down the creek. When she was found by her brother her breath had apparently stopped, but she soon recovered and appeared none the worse from the accident.

DEEP GAP CAMP OPEN FOR USE

Camp Is Equipped With All Facilities For Convenience

Deep Gap campground, located at the foot of Standing Indian mountain in the Nantahala National forest, is now open for public use, forest officials announced today.

The new campground, constructed during the past spring and winter months, is equipped with all the necessary facilities for camping and picnicking.

A forest service road along Buck creek connects the campground with U. S. 64 near Rainbow Springs. Trails lead from the campground to Standing Indian with its high cliff overlooking the lakes in Georgia, to Pickins Nose, a rugged mountain peak, and to High Falls at the headwaters of the Tallulah river.

Purple rhododendron has been planted in the campground to form a continuation of the beds of this shrub found at the top and along the slopes of Standing Indian mountain.

The Appalachian Trail, a footpath from Maine to Georgia, passes through the campground. Two Andirondack type leantos have been constructed for the convenience of hikers who visit the camp.

DILLARD MAN FOUND DEAD

Lawrence Webb Shot In Head While on Lone Squirrel Hunt

Lawrence Webb, who lived at Dillard, Ga., was found dead near Commissioner's creek in Smith's Bridge township, Tuesday evening about dusk. The entire load from a 16-gauge shotgun had entered his forehead and the gun was found lying at his feet. From the position of the body it was thought that he had been sitting on a log when the gun was fired.

Mr. Webb spent Monday night at the home of Lester Greene and Tuesday morning borrowed Mr. Greene's gun to go squirrel hunting. He told Mrs. Greene that if he had no luck he would soon return and work in the corn field.

Mr. Greene returned Tuesday afternoon about 5 o'clock from a road job where he was employed, and when Webb failed to come in he became uneasy and started out to investigate. He and others had heard a gun shot about 5 o'clock and this made him fear that Webb had met with an accident. The search was continued until the body was found.

Sheriff A. B. Slagle was notified Wednesday morning and left for the scene immediately, accompanied by Deputy Sheriff John Dills, Coronor C. M. Moore and Harley R. Cabe, clerk of the superior court.

An inquest was held and several witnesses were examined and the jury brought in a verdict to the effect that Webb died by his own hand, and that it might be either accident or suicide. The jury was composed of the following: Arthur Carpenter, Alden Justice, Charlie Battles, George Beasley, Warren Castle and J. L. Norton.

Mr. Webb was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Webb, of Dillard, Ga., and the body was taken there for burial.
