GET A LIFT WITH A CAMEL!

With Modern Beauty Added

When the boys marched away to Cuba, the first MONARCHS were made by hand above an Iowa hardware store . . . made of steel and unbreakable malleable iron, riveted together like a steam boiler.

They didn't look very inviting according to today's standards—but they were unbreakable; they were economical of fuel; and they did the same perfect baking after years of hard use that they did when new.

Nearly forty years have passed but no one has ever discovered a new way to build ranges of equal stamina. So, inside the beautiful 1936 MONARCH porcelain enamel body you will find today the same unbreakable, full malleable construction.

How much more you can appreciate beauty when you know it goes hand in hand with service that will last a lifetime!
