

U. D. C. AWARDS ESSAY PRIZES

"turn for nursing," she did a vast amount of good during the war and many were the weary miles she rode side-saddle to the sickbeds of the women and children who succumbed to the hunger, cold, and exposure of the hard winters of the war.

While her husband was gone with the army, Avaline, her children, and her aged uncle, who could hoe but could not plow, put in their crop and raised enough corn to feed, not only her own family, but the families of other weaker women who had either not foreseen the hard winter, or else had chosen to forget it until it was upon them. This generous woman divided one hundred bushels of corn with her neighbors at one time, but the "too-greedy" women were guilty of bragging that when that was gone, they would go to her crib and "press" her corn. With her black eyes snapping, tall, slender, dark-haired, dark-skinned, Avaline spread abroad the word that, if necessary, she would sleep in her corn crib with her shotgun and that she would not hesitate to use it. Evidently she spoke convincingly, for no one ever tried to steal her corn.

At harvest time, that first year of the war, someone brought some sheets of iron from Georgia, for the purpose of making syrup boilers. Avaline mounted her horse and rode ten miles to obtain one of these sheets and carried it home with her. After the boiler was made, she ground (on a home-made wooden cane mill) and boiled off 80 gallons of molasses. In four days the molasses was stored in barrels, and two weeks later her fourth child was born.

Such feats of bravery and endurance were characteristic of this woman's entire life.

When Avaline was about 50 years old, she and her husband, with their eight children, moved from Big Ivy creek to Macon county where she spent the remainder of her life. Until she was an old woman, she rode side-saddle over the hills, visiting and nursing the sick. When a horse was not available, she walked. Is it any wonder the entire countryside loved her?

Although her praises are unsung and her acts of mercy and bravery, like those of many other women of her time, have gone unrewarded, because of her perseverance, courage, and gentleness, my great-grandmother is my favorite of all Civil War heroines.

Brother, Sister Meet After Sixty Years

N. M. Chambers, of Rome, Ga., spent the week-end with his sister, Mrs. P. C. Calloway, of Highlands, who was visiting her son, E. T. Calloway, in Franklin.

This was the first time this brother and sister had met for more than 60 years. Being orphans, Mrs. Calloway, at the age of 12 years, and Mr. Chambers, at 9, became separated when they went to make their homes with relatives. Mrs. Calloway has made her home at Highlands for a number of years.

Revival Starts Sunday At Dryman's Chapel

Rev. O. E. Croy, pastor, will begin a revival meeting at Dryman's Chapel next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The revival will run through the week, with services beginning each evening at 8 o'clock and the song service at 7:45.

The public is cordially invited to attend all of these services.

CARD OF THANKS

I wish to express my deep appreciation for the sympathy shown me in the loss of my husband and especially for the beautiful floral offerings.

MRS. LOUISE SHIDLES.
