RAINFALL HAS BEEN UNUSUALLY HEAVY

"Hasn't it been unusually rainy?" Here's the story. The average normal precipitation for the month of July is approximately 8 inches in Highlands. The total rainfall for July, 1937, was 8.81 inches. There were no excessive rains during the month, but frequent showers.

The average normal precipitation for the month of August is approximately seven inches, but August, 1937, was unusually rainy with a total rainfall of 14.49 inches. There were frequent showers and several heavy rains. The rain of Saturday, August 7, was by far the heaviest rain for a 24-hour period for the year, up to the present date. During the course of a few hours on the afternoon of the 7th 3.64 inches of rain fell. There was also a severe thunderstorm at the same time, and several other thunderstorms during the month.

There were only four days during August when there was no precipitation, and only one clear day during the entire month.

These figures were furnished by Miss Gertrude Harbison, who keeps the official records for Highlands at her home on the Walhalla road.

MUSEUM CLOSSES AFTER SUCCESSFUL SEASON

The Highlands museum closed on Monday, September 7, after a very busy and successful season. Mr. Wheeler, the director, said that there have been more visiting educational workers and scientists at the museum this year than ever before. The various exhibits at the museum have been enlarged this year and the entomological exhibit put into cases due to the kindness of Miss Clarissa Ravenal in providing the necessary funds. The collection will henceforth be known as the Clarissa Ravenal Entomological collection. The library of scientific works which was presented to the museum last year by Miss C. B. Elliott will now be known as the John B. Elliott Memorial library. The children's groups in charge of Mrs. Wheeler was larger and accomplished more this year than ever before. The group was supervised by the Rev. W. F. Beadle, pastor of the Highlands Methodist church, assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Parsons, of Hollywood, Fla., Miss Avery, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Miss Carlin, of Miami, Fla.
