

AIR MAIL WEEK OCTOBER 11-16

Postmasters Make Plans For Celebration In North Carolina

CHARLOTTE, Sept. 29.—Postmasters of North Carolina are entering enthusiastically into plans for celebration of North Carolina Air Mail Week, according to Postmaster Paul R. Younts, of Charlotte, who has been named chairman of the Air Mail Week committee.

The observance of Air Mail Week, which has for its purpose making North Carolina air mail conscious and to impress upon business men the great value of the use of air mail, is being sponsored by the North Carolina association of postmasters, with the full cooperation of Eastern Air Lines and the postoffice department.

President Wythe Peyton, of Asheville, appointed Major Younts general chairman and announced plans for placing every town in the state with a landing field on the air mail route for one day.

The observance will be on the week of October 11-16. Harlee Branch, second assistant postmaster general, has pledged full cooperation in making the observance successful.

On October 12, Eastern Air Line planes will make stops at all of the cities and towns in North Carolina with landing fields to pick up air mail.

The air mail from all of the eastern cities will be taken to Raleigh and placed on E. A. L. planes there. Air mail of towns and cities in western North Carolina will be brought to Charlotte and taken on by one of the six planes making daily stops here.

Both planes will start from Kitty Hawk, where aviation was born when the Wright brothers first flew a plane soon after the turn of the century.

Beautiful cachets are being prepared for each of the 50 or more towns and cities that will be on the one-day air mail route. A replica of the Kitty Hawk Memorial will be on the cachets. From this point they will differ with each town and city having its own individual cachet, bearing the slogan of the city, some date of important significance, or some other material of which the city is civic conscious.

Postmasters in each of the air mail stops are planning to contact representatives of civic clubs, business organizations, city and county officials and others who can aid in making the week a success.

Appropriate ceremonies will be arranged at each of the points, and officials in Charlotte and Raleigh will give appropriate greetings to the special planes when they arrive from their pick up trips.

The officials in every city and town in the state having a post-office will be urged by the postmaster to give the airmail a trial, and indications are that the cooperation in the observance will be almost 100 per cent throughout the state.

Asheville Social Security Office Reviews Work Done

Completing its first six months of operation, the Asheville field office of the social security board reviewed the work it has accomplished to date, and revealed its plans for the future.

The field office was established last March in line with the policy of the board to bring administration of the old-age insurance program as close as possible to those affected by it. Under its jurisdiction are 19 western North Carolina counties.

In the first few months, according to Graham Martin, manager, the work of the local field office was primarily of an informational character. Through the press, radio, and talks before civic organizations, members of the field office staff attempted to bring about a wider understanding of the old-age insurance program. Through cooperation of employers, civic clubs, and others, over 35,000 pieces of explanatory informational material have been distributed.

On July 1 the postoffice department turned over to the field office the task of assigning social security account numbers. From that date through yesterday over 10,000 account numbers have been issued from the Asheville office.

While there is a considerable number of employees who have not yet made application for numbers, Mr. Martin estimated that the greater part of the employees in this area have already received numbers. While this work will continue, the field office will devote the major portion of its time in the future to the development of claims under the old-age insurance plan.

Through September 21, 58 claims have been filed with the Asheville field office. Thirty have been paid, and the others are now being adjusted.

Employees who have become 65 since the first of the year, are entitled to receive 3½ per cent of the wages they have earned since January 1.

Widows or other surviving relatives of workers who have died since the first of the year are also entitled to 3½ per cent of the total wages received by the workers since January 1, it was pointed out.

Only one claim has been received in Macon county.

Apparently, Mr. Martin said, many persons in Macon county who are eligible to apply for these benefits are not familiar with their rights under the law. Forms for applying for these lump-sum payments are extremely simple, and any one who thinks he may have a claim was urged to get in touch with the local office, where every possible assistance will be given in the development of the claim.
