

MACON COUNTY HEALTH REPORT

The following detailed statement from the Macon county health department shows the amount of work done during September:

Twenty cases of measles, three cases of scarlet fever and 23 cases of whooping cough were reported and investigated by the Macon county health department during the month of September. The health officer and nurse visited all these cases one or more times.

Two hundred and fifty-two physical examinations were made by the physician in the school hygiene program. Thirty-six of this number examined were 4-H club members. Thirty-nine of the 252 examined were referred for medical care. The nurse inspected a total of 700 school children. Four children having diseased tonsils and one with defective eyes were reported corrected. Several lectures and talks on school hygiene were given by the physician and nurse during their school visits.

Typhoid clinics continued on Fridays as usual in the schools and were attended by the respective communities. Two hundred and ninety-six whites and 86 colored were immunized against typhoid fever. Smallpox clinics were held in conjunction with the school examinations and 46 children were immunized against smallpox. Seventeen children between the ages of six months and five years were immunized against diphtheria.

One new case of syphilis was reported and referred to our clinic by a local physician. Seven treatments for syphilis were given during this month. Six blood tests were made for syphilis and of this group one was found to be positive, and this patient is now beginning a series of treatments.

The nurse made several visits to mothers, infants, midwives and registrars in the county. Nursing visits were made to all known cases of tuberculosis at least once during the month. Several morbidity visits were made and four crippled children were visited, one of whom attended the Bryson City diagnostic clinic, Saturday, September 18.

The sanitary engineer visited 20 private premises and 33 schools in his general sanitation program. Several approved fountains were installed in the schools. Twenty-six food establishments were visited in making check-ups on sanitary ratings. One visit was made to dairy farms and one to a milk plant.

Twenty-nine live births were reported in Macon county for the month of September, and one tuberculosis death occurred. Total deaths from all causes during the month of September were seven.

FIRE DANGER SURVEY MADE

The President has proclaimed October 3-9 as National Fire Prevention Week. In connection with forest fire prevention, an intensive survey of forest fire danger conditions and problems is being made by the Nantahala national forest, Paul H. Gerrard, forest supervisor, announced today.

From the survey, which is taking the entire time of one man for three months, plans will be developed to reduce the number of man-caused fires and by prompt discovery of fires and quick suppression work, to reduce the acreage burned.

During the past five years there have been 314 man-caused fires on the Nantahala national forest. One-fourth of these fires were caused by farmers burning brush or debris and allowing their fires to get out of their control. State and federal laws require that residents notify adjoining land owners prior to burning brush and that a burning permit must be obtained from state or federal forest service officials before the burning is done. Local residents will be contacted in the near future to obtain their cooperation in eliminating these fires.

In addition to the government land protected from fire, J. S. Holmes, state forester of North Carolina, with an organization of wardens and guards, is protecting thousands of acres of private forest land throughout the state. Through the close cooperation of the state and federal forestry forces, it is believed that the disastrous fires of the past will be greatly reduced and the state's timber and recreation beauty protected from the ravages of fire.
