

State College Answers Timely Farm Questions

Q. Is it possible to tell how long a chicken has been laying by the bleaching process?

A. Yes. In yellow skinned birds the yellow color is given to the fat by a pigment called Xanthophyll. This is found just beneath the skin and as the bird lays, this pigment disappears in a fairly regular manner which indicates approximately the time the bird has been laying. Bleaching of the vent shows the bird has laid two to three eggs. Where the earlobes are bleached the bird has been in lay from two to three weeks. Bleached beaks mean from six to eight weeks of fairly heavy production and bleached shanks show that the bird has been laying from four to six months. The pigment returns after the birds go out of lay in the same order.

Q. When should I apply manure to my garden plot?

A. For best results manure should be applied during the fall and winter and either turned under at the fall plowing or disced in during early spring. If applied at all during the spring or summer it should be in a well-rotted condition. On average soils the rate of application should be ten two-horse wagon loads to the acre. When applied at this rate one wagon load will cover a space approximately 50 by 100 feet and this should be the rule of application on home gardens. Some crops require a supplement to the manure and a combination of manure and superphosphate is good for most soils. Apply this mixture in the proportion of 10 loads of manure to two or three bags of superphosphate.
