

Death Claims For Old Age Insurance Being Paid

Relatives of several young men in Macon county have received government checks, recently, in payment of death claims for old-age insurance provided by the social security act, Graham Martin, manager of the field office of the social security board at Asheville, said today. Benefits which accrue to the credit of young employees are not lost, in case the young man or woman dies, after working for a while in a job covered by old-age insurance provisions of the social security act. "Whether a deceased worker may have been 16 or 60 makes no difference," said Mr. Martin. "If his wage or salary record shows that he had participated in the government's old-age insurance program, his relatives are immediately entitled to whatever benefits may have accumulated to his credit."

The average amount of the old-age insurance claims certified in February to claimants in North Carolina was $22.95.

Mr. Martin stated that there are two types of lump-sum payments that can be made at any time after January 1, 1937. One is the death benefit which the Federal government is paying to relatives of workers who have died since January 1, 1937, and whose wage-earnings between the last day of 1936 and the day of their death entitled them to benefits. The other type of lump-sum benefit, now payable, is for men and women, still living, who have reached 65 since December 31, 1936, who have been paid wages in a factory, shop, mill, mine, store or some other line of business or industry included under the law, since the last day of 1936, and before reaching age 65.

More than 2,000 claims for lump-sum payments of old-age insurance from the state of North Carolina have been certified for payment by the social security board, since the first of January, 1937. "This means," Mr. Martin said, "that most of the claims we have received in North Carolina for lump-sum payments of old-age insurance benefits have been approved by the social security board, and forwarded to the United States Treasury for payment."

All that is necessary in order to secure claim application blanks is to call at the social security board office in Asheville, or simply write to that office, and ask for suitable application forms.

Without cost, assistance in filling out the forms will be given to claimants by any field office of the social security board. After the forms are properly made out, the claim is then sent to Washington for final adjudication and settlement. When the claim is approved, a check will be mailed to the proper claimant.
