Success In Making Jelly No Accident

Making clear, sparkling-bright, firm but quivering jelly is not just a matter of cooking fruit juice with sugar and trusting to luck, according to home demonstration specialists of the State college extension service.

Fine jelly is not so easy to make, as many a housewife can testify after turning out a batch of gummy or syrupy stuff that refused to jell, or perhaps was tough, gummy, dull colored, and without flavor. "Lots of sad things can happen, as any jelly-maker knows," said Miss Sallie Brooks, assistant extension nutritionist.

A wide, shallow, flat-bottomed kettle is best for cooking the sugar and fruit juice for making jelly. Such a kettle permits rapid evaporation and brings the mixture to the jelling point without the long cooking that spoils the color and flavor.

A cup of sugar for each cup of fruit juice is often used, but sometimes it is best to have a little more juice than sugar, depending upon the kind of juice used. Too much water or excessive fruit moisture will keep the product from attaining the fine quality desired for marketing or for home consumption.

The question of when to take the jelly from the stove is of great importance. Keep dipping a large spoon in the boiling syrup, lifting it up, and allowing the syrup to run off the side of the spoon. It is ready to take off the stove when it will not run off the spoon in a steady stream, but separates into two distinct lines of drops which tend to "sheet together."

Farmers Treat Seed To Increase Yields

North Carolina farmers are fast ridding their cotton fields of damping-off disease, the scourge that has been cutting heavy inroads into the Tar Heel cotton crop in recent years.

In 1934, Carolina farmers planted 2,000 acres with seed that had been treated with two per cent Ceresan, which kills the organisms causing damping-off disease, said Dr. Luther Shaw, extension plant pathologist at State college.

The results were good and the next year more treated seed were planted on a larger acreage. Last year the acreage planted to treated seed jumped to 200,000 acres, and this year 400,000 acres of cotton were planted with treated seed.

Dr. Shaw and O. P. Owens, another extension plant pathologist, report that in a recent survey of piedmont and coastal plain counties they found that farmers who planted treated seed had almost twice as many plants per 100 feet of row as were growing on fields where the seed had not been dusted with Ceresan.

There were 431 plants per 100 feet of row from treated seed and only 280 plants per 100 feet of row growing from untreated seed. Moreover, they found that 72 per cent of the plants from untreated seed had sore shin, while only 20 per cent of the plants from treated seed were affected.

Treating cotton seed costs about 25 cents per acre to be planted, and the increase in yield and quality of the lint bring growers from $11 to $13 or more per acre, depending upon price, weather conditions, and other factors.
