B. Y. P. U. ACTIVITIES

The program was opened by the singing of two songs. Then the Bible quiz leader, Mr. Benfield, asked interesting questions on "The Father, the the object of worship and the guide of our lives."
 The program was then turned over to Mrs. Pierson, who made an interesting talk on "James Marion Frost, Constructive Dreamer."
 The B. Y. P. U. planned to have a midnight supper at Ammons camp ground Thursday night, July 14. They are going to meet at the Baptist church at 6:30 o'clock.
 The parts were then given out for the next Sunday night by the group captain, Paul Waldon, and the program turned over to Rev. J. G. Benfield for church services.

The How and Why Of Hybrid Corn

By SAM WILLIAMS
 Assistant County Agent

Perhaps no other advancement in the field of American agriculture has been more outstanding than the development of hybrid corn. It has taken many years of theoretical research to reach the present stage of its development and yet it is a very unusual phase of agriculture in many sections of the country.
 Very few farmers in North Carolina have been faced with the problem of choosing between hybrid corn seed and the normal open pollinated type. However, this may be one of their problems in the near future if our system of crop production keeps pace with other states.
 The question is asked many times, what is hybrid corn? It is the selling of desirable plants of productive varieties to secure an inbred line, that when crossed to another inbred line from another productive variety, gives seed with enough added vigor to outyield the original parent variety by as much as 35 per cent. To the person who has not had any actual experience with hybrid corn the above probably sounds like a tall story, yet in 1935 there were over 194,000 acres planted for commercial production in the United States. But the most unusual part about the yield from these 194,000 acres is that the seed cannot be planted for the next year's crop even though they have given an outstanding yield. The grower must secure seed from the breeder each year, which is the result of controlled crossing of two selfed lines.
 By inbred lines or selfed lines is meant the placing of a 14 or 16 pound size paper bag over the corn tassel before it has shed any pollen and that a small glassine bag be placed over the shoot before the silks appear to prevent any crossing of pollen from other corn tassels.
 When the pollen begins to shed in the paper bag, the tassel with the bag over it is broken off and placed over the silks from which the glassine bag has been removed. The ear of corn resulting from this artificial pollination is called inbred. The process has to be carried on for five or six years before the variety can be said to be absolutely pure. When it is crossed with another ear produced the same way it is called a hybrid ear. The seed from this ear gives the increased yield mentioned previously.

 Hybrid corn seed is very poor in appearance and has no chance of competing with our regular show corn, but in a great many instances, when bushels for the crib are desired, it will take its place at the top of the list.
 Many times hybrid corn has made good yields despite adverse weather conditions and insect attack where open pollinated types have failed.

If any farmer chooses to grow hybrid corn, my advice to him would be to purchase his seed from a noted breeder instead of trying to secure two inbred lines and cross them to produce his hybrid seed because this would require very careful work and a great deal of time. The seed from hybrid corn cannot be planted for the next year's crop, it must be secured from the breeder each year.

Time in Playing Chess

Before timing clocks were introduced in a chess tournament in London in 1883, a player could take as long as he wished to determine a move. One of the longest periods of this kind, says Collier's Weekly, occurred during America's first Chess Congress in New York in 1857 when Louis Paulsen, while playing against Paul Morphy, took more than 14 hours to make one move.
