Second Annual Highlands Playday Draws Crowd of Interested Spectators

The second annual Highlands Playday, on August 19, was at least double the success in every way that it was last year, with a great many entries in the events of the day and a crowd of interested spectators who followed the happenings around town from 10 in the morning to 11 that night.

Elmer McDowell, as king for the day, Doris Potts, as queen and their attendants, Maxine Talley, Isabel Hall and Harry Holt, Jr., led the starting pet parade. Dressed in costumes of black, white and green, the official Playday colors, they appeared in an open car loaned for the occasion by Sam Beaty, and greeted their subjects. With a rnythm band from Camp Trillium the pet parade wended its way through town, loud with the barks of dogs, the quacks of ducks and the sequals of delight of the spectators over the various animals. This contest was won by Virginia Mae Edwards, with a black dog; Jean Keener, who entered a large white duck with a bright green ribbon around its neck; and Jessie Keener, who had twin Chow puppies.

There followed the baby contest, with the judges shaking their heads over the difficulty of making a decision. Finally the prizes for three age groups were given, respectively, to Nancy Jane Norton, Jack Marvin Beaty and Pollyann Diffenbach.

On the porch of Highlands Inn the doll exhibit and the flower show attracted many people. All of the home-dressed dolls showed originality and industry, with prizes going to Judge Thompson and Virginia Mae Edwards. In the flower show first prize for specimen and arrangement went to Mrs. Clarence Mitchell; for dahlias to Mrs. Jessie Moreland; and for wild flower arrangement to Miss Frost.

The wagon race took eager entrants from Anderson's drug store to Zoellner's garage, with Arthur Seaver and Buddy Thompson in first and second place, Herbert Paul in third.

The music contest in the afternoon attracted a large audience and gave almost two hours of varied musical entertainment. The town people of Highlands were pleased and somewhat surprised to discover so much local talent, both vocal and instrumental, and made a vow to make more use of it in the future. The mountain music division of the contest was won by two Wilson boys and Hunter Young, playing guitars and singing "What Would You Give for the Price of Your Soul." Instrumental music was won by Ann Hetzel who played a piano solo and the vocal music was won by Betty Nollman, who gave an unaccompanied dramatic solo. In connection with the music contest it should be noted that Mrs. Holt played a "Highlands March" which she composed several years ago and which everyone considered to be an exceptionally excellent piece of original music which the town hopes to hear often in the future.

Following the music contest Dr. T. J. O'Neil officiated at a grabbag auction sponsored by the Funmakers, with a good deal of humorous comment on girls bidding high on tie pins and men getting paper fans.

The evening was occupied with a street dance, a fortune teller and food booths sponsored by the Pioneer Christian Endeavor and the B. Y. P. U. There were prizes for the best couple dancing in each of four sets, and excellent music by the players who were under the direction of Henry Zoellner. The musicians played so long and so well that the Funmakers feel they are due a special note of appreciation.

To the summer visitors who were judges for the various events the Funmakers also feel especially grateful. In every contest they had a difficult decision to make and it was generous of them to give their time and judgment so willingly.

The money which the Funmakers made during Playday far exceeded their profits from last year and will be used during the coming year for play manuscripts, a costume box and other details which the club to date has been unable to finance.

The stores doing a rush business all day, decorated gayly in the Playday colors, with children and adults full of the spirit of fun and friendliness all day and able to see the pleasing fruits of their labors for the day, with so many recipients of the prizes which tradespeople had so generously donated, and with weather that smiled on Highlands all day, there seemed nothing lacking in anyone's pleasure when the lights finally went out on the street dance and a tired but very happy town went to bed.

Following is a list of the prizes which were donated for Playday: Pierson House, King's Inn, Tricemont Terrace, Hall House, Highlands Inn, Fairview Inn and Potts House, two meals each; Anderson's Drug Store, a ten cent drink for 30 days; Highlands Hardware, $2.50 in trade; Holt's Shooting Gallery, $1.00 in trade; Corner Drug Store, $2.50 in trade; Bryson's Garage, two gallons of gas; Joseph's Art and Linen Shop, a pottery vase; $1.00 in cash from Edward's House; a puzzle set from Louis Edwards' woodwork shop; the bowling alley, game for two; Archery Range, 10 free lessons; G. W. Maret, $1.50 in trade; F. A. Edwards, $1.50 in trade; Potts Bros., $2.50 in trade; Rideout Cafe, 50 cents in cash; Sara Gilder, pencil and pen set; Rice's Meat Market, a leg of lamb; Talley and Burnette, $1.00 in trade; Highlands Barber Shop, free hair cut and shave; Sinclair Service Station, one quart of Penn motor oil; Miss Inman's Knit Shop, $1.00 in cash; Orange Jug, luncheon set; Helen's Barn, free ticket to a dance; Highlands Theatre, four free tickets; Dugout, two steak dinners; Do-See-Do, $2.00 free play.

ANNUAL MEETING HELD AT LABORATORY

The annual meeting of the Highlands Museum and Biological Laboratory was held last Saturday afternoon at the laboratory. A good number of people were present to hear the reports of the secretary, treasurer, the president, and the directors. The secretary read the minutes of the previous meeting; the treasurer reported the receipt of $500 this year, $300 for the building fund and $200 in memberships and donations, which was also reported by the membership committee. Miss Mary J. Crosby was elected a trustee to fill a vacancy. Dr. Coker gave an interesting report of the laboratory work. He said that more work was being accomplished this summer at the laboratory than ever before. Five scholarships to the laboratory were given this year: two from the University of North Carolina, two from Vanderbilt University, and one from Duke. Other scientists have carried on their work on ferns, fungi, salamanders, etc.

The director of the Museum, Dr. Wheeler, gave his usual interesting and enthusiastic report of the work and program of the Museum, which is the "popular expression of the biological laboratory, one of the few inland biological stations in the United States." During the summer the museum offers many attractions, including excursions and expeditions to points of interest and also arranges a series of lectures on popular subjects.

Plans were discussed for a new museum building to be erected on Main street between the Blanchard and Pierson properties. This land is now owned by the laboratory and extends from the Main street back to Lindewood Lake.

Plans for the building were shown by the architects and described by the director. The building will consist of three units, the first of which is under consideration at the present time. This is the central unit in which will be designed to the main exhibition interests. The other units will house special exhibits, systematic collections, a scientific laboratory, and workshops, an auditorium, class rooms, library, and administrative offices. The building will be constructed of native stone and probably chestnut. It will be a two story building, one of which will be fire-proof to house museum specimens.

Dr. Wheeler says that one of the features of the exhibition hall will be the installation of a large forest conifer, in whose branches, extending into the roof of the building, will be mounted the nesting birds of the region. These will be easily seen and studied from a balcony extending around the hall.

Another feature which will be interesting, instructive, and beautiful, is the development of a topographic garden, reproducing to scale a considerable part of the mountain territory, surrounding Highlands. In this miniature arboretum will be grown the significant shrubs and herbaceous plants of the mountains. Many other features are being planned for future development at the new building.

The museum and laboratory is a large part of the summer attraction to Highlands and as such means a great deal to the town. In educating our people its value cannot be counted. This project needs the support of all who are interested in Highlands. It will be necessary to raise $5,000 for the building, and the WPA will supplement this with sufficient funds to carry out the building of the first unit.

Contributions may be made to Miss Marguerite Ravenel and will be gratefully received and appreciated by all who are connected with this important work.

Following the meeting refreshments were served in Rhododendron Park with Mrs. Coker and Miss Marguerite Ravenel as hostesses.

FUNERAL HELD FOR LITTLE JANE CALLOWAY

The funeral of little Jane Calloway, 22-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. DeWitt Calloway, was held at the Presbyterian church on Monday afternoon. The child died on Sunday following an attack of asthma and croup. The Rev. R. B. DuPree officiated at the service and the choir sang two hymns. Mrs. DuPree and Miss Stringer sang a lullaby, as a duet. Burial was in the Highlands cemetery.

time to the hospital and I anticipate that there will be a great development in the missionary activity and in the efficiency of the various departments. I expect to see the hospital put upon an efficient basis with technicians who will make the work as definite and as sure as can be done in these modern times. Naturally the financial ability of a missionary enterprise is limited, but within these limits I feel sure that the personal devotion which this man manifests toward his profession and his fellow men, in caring for the sick and suffering, in instructing the nurses and in interpreting the healing of Christ to mankind, will give St. Luke's Hospital an ever broadening and deepening influence among the people of the southern side of Puerto Rico."

Pure Bred Rooster Can Improve Flock

Farmers who produce their own hatching eggs will find that a good, pure bred rooster is worth much more than he costs, according to C. J. Maupin, extension poultry specialist at State college.

Good qualities such as heavy production, laying large eggs, rapid growth, and bodily vigor are inheritable, he explained, and it pays to use a rooster of good breeding that can transmit these qualities to his offspring.

He also recommended that growers breed their males only to their best hens.
